Crowd Cheers Apparent Attack on Rolph and "Pagan Ethics."

Forecasts Great Era of Prosperity

Roosevelt Declares "New War" for Justice, Better Living.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In a speech loaded with implication, President Roosevelt last night caustically condemned lynching as "a vile form of collective murder," and struck out anew at the "pagan ethics" of present-day civilization the New Deal is designed to overcome.

Addressing the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the President declared "war for social justice," extolled "this new philosophy of Government," and predicted an approaching era of great prosperity.

While microphones carried his words to a Nation stirred by recent outbreaks of mob violence, the President made his first public reference to the wave of lynchings. Leaning against the speakers' stand at Constitution Hall, he declared feelingly:

"This new generation * * * is not content with preachings against that vile form of collective murder—lynch law—which has broken out in our midst anew. We know that it is murder and a deliberate and definite disobedience of the commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill.'"

Applause Sweeps Hall.

Applause swept the hall as he enunciated the last sentence and waited to declare with even more feeling this statement:

"We do not excuse those in high places, or in low, who condone lynch law."

The stinging rebuke to Gov. Rolph of California, who praised the hanging of two kidnapers at San Jose, was not lost on an intent audience, which burst forth into louder applause. The slow manner of its delivery was evidence of the President's deep feeling against lynchings, including mob action in Maryland, and it was apparent he had waited only a suitable opportunity—such as his address to the churchmen—to declare it.

Continuing to assert that "quick and certain justice" must be provided to combat lynch law, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"But a thinking America goes further. It seeks a government of its own that will be sufficiently strong to protect the prisoner and at the same time to crystalize a public opinion so clear that government of all kinds will be compelled to practice a more certain justice.

Predicts Era of Great Gain.

"The judicial function of government is the protection of the individual and of the community through quick and certain justice. That function in many places has fallen into a sad state of disrepair.

U. S. Minister In Prague Quits

State Department Gets Resignation of White; No Action Taken.

(United Press.)

The resignation of Francis White, American Minister to Czechoslovakia, has been received at the State Department, but no action has been taken on it, the United Press learned last night.

It was said that he wanted to leave his Prague post chiefly because most of his diplomatic career has been spent as an expert on Latin-American and South American affairs and that he had little taste for a European assignment.

White was Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin-American affairs in the Hoover Administration and was said to have desired the Ambassadorship to Cuba or Chile. He favored cooperation with the Machado regime in Cuba, and this and other Latin-American views are in conflict with the policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

Break With Ireland Refused by British

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—A proposal made today in the House of Lords that Great Britain break off all relations with the Irish Free State was dismissed by the government as an undesirable step.

Lord Hailsham, Great Britain's minister for war, representing the government in debate over the perplexing Irish crisis, said "it is easier to break off relations than to find satisfactory means of reestablishing them."

He said it would not be "a satisfactory or helpful step."

Lindberghs Span Sea, 1875 Miles, in 16 Hours

Trip Fine, Weather Good, Flier's Brief Comment on Landing Amid Fiesta Disrupting Business at Natal, Brazil.

Natal, Brazil, Dec. 6 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wireless-operating wife, the former Anne Morrow, alighted on the harbor here at 3:10 p. m., Brazil time (1:10 p. m. E. S. T.), today after flying from Bathurst, Gambia, Africa, 1,875 miles away in 16 hours, 10 minutes.

It was the longest over-water flight of their aerial survey tour.

The population of Natal, its business offices closed for the fiesta of welcome, its streets decorated, packed the waterfront.

At 2:50 p. m. a keen-eyed watcher caught the first glimpse of the great red monoplane. Launch whistles blared and from the crowd arose a mighty roar of "Viva!"

Straight in toward the harbor the plane flew, and passed above the cheering throng. Lindbergh banked it gracefully over the town and set it down smoothly.

Record for Anne.

With the alighting of the ship, Mrs. Lindbergh became the first woman ever to fly in an airplane across the South Atlantic.

When welcoming delegations reached the anchored monoplane, Lindbergh's words, as usual, were few.

"It was a fine trip," he said, "with fine flying conditions. We encountered occasional strong south winds."

British Consul Entertains.

That was his sole immediate comment on the fight. In addition, he thanked an official committee for the warm welcome extended Mrs. Lindbergh and himself. He was greeted by the government "interventor," Mario Camara, who extended an official welcome in the name of President Getulio Vargas.

The official launch carried Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh to the docks, where police held back the excited crowds.

The flying Americans went to the home of the British Consul, where they were to be entertained.

30 More Tax Sources Offer $35,000,000

Ways and Means Members Would Levy Gambling and Gift Charges.

By Robert C. Albright.

Sifting the law for new items of taxable income, the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday increased estimates of possible revenues by $35,000,000, tapping 30 additional sources in its search for funds.

At the same time the committee abandoned efforts to make the taxes generally retroactive on this year's income. The new revenue bill will apply only "to any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1933."

"In many cases it is impossible to make the proposed changes retroactive on account of constitutional objections," a subcommittee report stated.

"Furthermore, some doubt exists as to the possibility of passing the bill by March 1, which certainly should be done if the changes are to be given effect in returns filed on March 15."

Supplementing major recommendations submitted Tuesday for saving $237,000,000 in taxes by curtailing corporate tax avoidance and adjusting surtaxes in the higher brackets, a special subcommittee yesterday carried its researches further and uncovered the additional $35,000,000.

Thirty supplementary recommendations hit directly at income derived from gambling, transfer of property within families to avoid taxes, and deduction of death and gift taxes from net incomes.

Prompted by Senate Banking Committee disclosures, the subcommittee recommended broader information returns to the Internal Revenue Commissioner from brokers and corporations.

Dividend Reports Sought.

Corporations would be asked to report dividends paid any one person in excess of $1,000 annually, and brokers required to furnish names of persons doing more than $100,000 gross business with them annually.

The full House Ways and Means Committee went into session at once to consider subcommittee findings. Approximately a third of the report was covered in committee discussions, but no final action was taken.

Following the meeting, Chairman

U. S. May Use Club on High Liquor Prices

"Czar" of Rum Control Unit Ready to Curb Rising Cost of Whisky.

Unless prices for legal liquor drop within the next few days substantially below the figures quoted in some cities yesterday, the Federal Alcohol Control Administration will make the first use of its dictatorial power to force them down, it was learned last night.

The F. A. C. A., it was understood, saw no occasion for whisky prices ranging between $4 and $7 a quart, and even higher, and stood ready to exercise its power over the liquor industry to stop profiteering.

Difficulties of distribution were regarded by Dr. James M. Doran, the new spokesman for the distillers, as responsible for the high retail prices. He believes prices will be lower in a few days, as soon as retail outlets increase, with subsequent competition.

Doran to Study Price.

Meanwhile, Dr. Doran moved headquarters of his new Association of Distilled Spirits Industry, which will be the code authority for the distillers, into the National Press Building. He said as soon as he could organize his staff he would have prepared lists of all distillers' prices and would submit these to the F. A. C. A., as required by code.

As soon as the F. A. C. A. receives these lists it will be in a position to determine responsibility for high prices. It has the authority to reject prices set by the distilling, blending, rectifying, importing and wholesale distributing industries. It has no authority, however, over retail prices because so far there has been no code formulated for retail dealers and may not be.

It is believed public opinion will serve as a curb on retail prices if the F. A. C. A. finds the profiteering is in that quarter. As the situation stood yesterday, according to reports from other cities, retailers contended they had to charge high prices because their costs were high. Spokesmen for the distillers denied any price gouging on the part of their industry.

Drinkers' Strike Urged.

Meanwhile Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), leading wet of St. Louis, Mo., urged a drinkers' strike in order to bring about more reasonable prices. He contended holders of warehouse receipts were profiteering and that it was "outrageous" when $7 a quart was charged for whisky. He predicted a Federal dispensary system would be set up if the present prices continued.

The F. A. C. A. is chiefly interested in keeping prices down as a part of President Roosevelt's campaign to crush illicit liquor traffic. If it is found the scarcity of liquor

2 Killed, 12 Hurt as Express Train Crashes Freight Wreck

Investigation of the double train wreck at Cherry Hill, Va., yesterday morning which took 2 trainmen's lives and injured 12 other persons was promised last night by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The fatalities occurred as a Florida-New York express train speeded around a curve to crash into the front end of a south-bound freight, derailed and wrecked a minute before by a landslide.

The dead, Edward E. Kuhn, engineer, and W. H. Jordan, fireman, both of Richmond, were thrown clear either by the crash or the boiler explosion which followed.

The narrow deep cut in which the wreck occurred was a shambles of wreckage, the two locomotives and tenders, ten steel coal cars and four baggage and mail cars being scrambled together like jackstraws. Cherry Hill is on the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway, about 30 miles from Washington.

The four mail and baggage cars of the 14-car passenger train saved the passengers in the rear coaches and Pullmans from anything more than minor injuries. The passenger cars stayed on the track, as did 60 freight cars.

The passengers hurt were Commander B. J. Nicholson, of New Bedford, Mass.; Mrs. H. H. Lavenstein, of Petersburg, Va.; David Cohert, of New York; Mary A. Stuckert, of Baltimore; Mrs. E. P. Paul, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mary Johnson, of Estelle, N. C., and Amanda Stanley, of Chicago.

Three of the freight's crew who were hurt were D. B. Winfree, engineer, and R. E. Mitchell, fireman, both of Richmond, and E. V. Hall, brakeman, of Ashland, Va. Injured

950 Millions Loan Sought By Treasury

Interest Rate Increased to Insure Success of Financing.

Response to Offerings Watched to Determine Banking Faith.

For the first time since its inauguration of its gold-purchase policy, the Roosevelt Administration yesterday launched a major financing operatoin when it called on the country's money markets to furnish the Treasury with $950,000,000 December 15.

In exchange for this sum the Treasury offered one-year certificates bearing an interest rate of 2¼ per cent. Although the Treasury since the depression started has paid higher rates for money, it also has floated short-term securities at much lower rates—as low as three-fourths of 1 per cent annually.

It appeared that in view of the agitation over the gold policy, the Treasury wished to make its offering sufficiently attractive to investors to assure its success. Nevertheless the response to this offering will be watched closely to determine to what extent the Administration's monetary policy has shaken faith in the Government's credit.

Moving With Caution.

Meanwhile the Administration continued to move with extreme caution in carrying out its gold-purchase policy, apparently in order not to disturb the Government security market. The R. F. C. for the fifth successive day left unchanged its gold price of $34.01 an ounce. In Paris, however, it was reported that American bank agents had resumed converting dollars nto francs for the purchase of gold. No figures as to purchases were given.

Shortly before the Treasury's financing operation was announced the White House disavowed any intention on the part of President Roosevelt to weaken the Securities act. Despite the statement of Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency committee, that he had received word that the Administration would propose a modification of the Securities act, the White House explained it had not been definitely determined to amend that strict measure.

On behalf of the President it was asserted that any assumption hat the act would be modified is unwarranted, that its objectives retain the support of Mr. Roosevelt and that, in any event, it will not be weakened. The statement, it was believed, would reassure several of the "young liberals" in the Administration who have talked of resigning in protest against what they regarded as reactionary activities.

Several Billions Needed.

Regardless of what is done about the securities act in the next Congress session, it appeared certain that the United States Government would remain the chief issuer of securities for some time to come. With revenue running far behind expenditures, the Government will have to borrow several billions of dollars in the next six months to pay the costs of the emergency program and to meet maturing short-term obligations.

Soon or late the Treasury will have to attempt a long-term bond issue, it is believed by Treasury experts. But apparently this will be put off until the Administration's monetary policies become clarified and fixed. For the present, it seems, the Treasury is unwilling to risk defeat in seeking to float a long-term issue.

Although Treasury officials insist they are satisfied with the response to the fourth Liberty Loan conversion operation, the latter is regarded as a failure, since approximately $1,000,000,000 of the bonds called

German "Flying Circus" Hero Killed in Crash

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 6 (AP).—Carlos Meyer-Baldo, subinspector of aviation for Venezuela, was killed today as his plane crashed at Maracay, Venezuela.

Johnson Given Rule of AAA Codes as Wallace, Peek Split; Hewes May Quit Treasury

Morgenthau Aid Said to Be Miffed at Loss of Authority.

Further Reduction Reported On Way

Yields Revenue Bureau Control; May Give Up Secret Service.

(Associated Press.)

An order by Acting Secretary Morgenthau removing the Internal Revenue Bureau from the authority of Assistant Secretary Thomas Hewes has created a breach at the Treasury which some officials believe may lead to Hewes' resignation.

Only the personal intervention of President Roosevelt was regarded by Treasury officials as offering an opportunity for renewed harmony. Even then, some believed, it was doubtful Hewes would remain, with the Treasury's greatest bureau removed from his command.

Morgenthau's order instructed the Internal Revenue Bureau to report henceforth to him.

May Lose Secret Service.

Since this ruling, it was reported Morgenthau was contemplating a second order which would remove the Secret Service from Hewes' supervision.

Herbert Gaston, assistant to Morgenthau, told reporters the Internal Revenue order was issued to enable Morgenthau to become more "familiar" with the tax bureau.

Hewes declined to comment.

Experienced officials at the Treasury, however, considered it unlikely he would remain in the Treasury except upon Mr. Roosevelt's personal request.

Specialists on Taxes.

They said this situation was emphasized by the fact that during his half-year of service, Hewes had specialized in tax matters, heading the Treasury committee working on income tax revision and assisting the House Ways and Means Committee.

Gaston said yesterday Prof. Roswell Magil, of Columbia University, one of the special assistants recently named by Morgenthau, was making a study of the Ways and Means Subcommittee recommendations on income taxes before the Treasury's final report would be drawn.

Officials at the Treasury expressed the opinion if Hewes should resign it would not indicate dissatisfaction with the President's program.

Hewes was appointed by President Roosevelt last May. Connecticut is his home State.

Keep Out of Bronx, Flynn Tells "Tiger"

Speech Viewed as Definite Break With Curry.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader in the Bronx, tonight told Tammany Hall to keep hands off his bailiwick.

"The Tiger," he shouted at a committee meeting, "will not cross the river as long as I have a voice to shout my protest."

Flynn, a friend of Postmaster General Farley and President Roosevelt, supported Joseph V. McKee in the recent race for mayor against John P. O'Brien and Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

Observers saw the statement as a definite break with John F. Curry.

Negro Escapes, White Man Captured After Crime.

New Lebanon, N. Y., Dec. 6 (U.P.). Passengers of a Pittsfield-Albany bus were held up near here tonight by two armed bandits, a white man and a Negro.

A woman passenger told New York State police she was assaulted by the Negro while the other bandit kept other passengers at bay with a revolver.

State police of Massachusetts and New York began a wide search throughout the section for the Negro. The white man was captured.

The youth was en route to New York to see his father.

Johnson's $6,800 Aid Rose From $25 Post

Miss Frances M. Robinson Draws Just $220 Less Than Her Chief.

A "new deal" success story within the ranks of the NRA was revealed yesterday when it was learned Miss Frances M. Robinson, six months ago a $25-a-week stenographer for the Democratic National Committee, had been catapulted into a job of prominence as administrative assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, at a base salary of $6,800 a year.

"Robbie," as she is known to Blue Eagle executives and employes when out of hearing, has been regarded as Gen. Johnson's secretary, and revelation of her new title came as a surprise. Her annual pay is only $220 less than the Administrator's.

Miss Robinson's salary is the fourth highest received by any NRA employe, and is on a par with those of deputy administrators.

Four Successive Raises.

Four successive raises in her base pay, involving an increase of more than $2,000 to more than offset the 15 per cent pay cut she took with all other Government workers, brought Miss Robinson's actual salary to $5,780. Gen. Johnson rates a flat $6,000, and the two-highest paid NRA officials are Donald R. Richberg at $12,000 (base pay) and Alvin

Pay Restored 5% in Budget Estimates

U. S. Employes Heartened by Figures for Year Beginning July 1.

Budget estimates for the fiscal year starting next July 1 will provide for only a 10 per cent reduction in Government employes' pay, instead of the prevailing 15 per cent slash, the House Appropriations Committee was advised yesterday.

Members of the subcommittee attached no great significance to the change of plans, as the President still retains his power to lift part or all of the cut at six-month intervals.

Government employes, however, were heartened by the announcement as indicative of the trend of the Labor Department's cost of living research, on which the President will base future pay cut relief.

Full Allowance Expected.

Word reached the House appropriations subcommittees from the Bureau of the Budget, and marked a sharp deviation from Director Lewis W. Douglas' original intention of basing 1935 estimates on 100 per cent salary allowance. It was announced originally the full salary allowances would be written into 1935 estimates, and adjustments made downward in line with the President's future pay-cut pronouncements.

At the last minute, however, it was decided to allow for 5 per cent pay cut restoration beginning next July. The decision was prompted largely by fear Congress would be making a mistake in appropriating more than salary requirements.

Some committee members said they anticipated the 5 per cent restoration will prove adequate in view of living-cost trends, but others expressed confidence the Labor Department's price survey should justify much greater relief by the time next July rolls around.

Cut Expires January 1.

The earliest opportunity the President will have to restore any part of the cut will be January 1, when the existing 15 per cent order expires.

Bank Deposit Guarantee Act Hit by Aldrich

Head of Chase National Tells Senators Security Act Too Drastic.

By Martha Dalrymple.

The dollar's uncertain value, the permanent feature of bank deposit guarantees in the banking act of 1933, and certain of the more stringent features of the securities act are among the outstanding hindrances to general business recovery, Winthrop W. Aldrich, head of Chase National Bank, told the Senate Banking subcommittee yesterday.

Called by the committee to amplify recommendations for banking reform which he gave the committee last week, Aldrich spared no words to express his apprehension if measures were not taken soon to create a "sound banking system properly run."

He stopped short on the subject of the Administration's monetary policy, saying it was a "very controversial subject." However, he listed the problem of American currency and the question of a stabilized dollar value as one of his five cardinal points on what is wrong with business and banks today.

Hits Unlimited Liability.

Aldrich predicted the permanent deposit guarantee provision of the Glass-Steagall act will tend to drive banks out of the Federal Reserve System.

Denouncing the feature of the unlimited liability of member banks for deposits of closed banks, Aldrich pointed out that he held no brief for the temporary provision for guarantee on deposits of $2,500 and less.

It was the section which provides a guarantee of all deposits with an unlimited liability upon all banks for contributions to the guarantee fund, designed to go into effect in July of 1934, which he said would "contribute to general financial distrust."

The solution he proposed was the retention of the guarantee on deposits of $2,500 and less, until such time as his Utopian "sound banking system" is realized.

The banker broke the usual calm

Thirsty Hie to Silver Spring, Nearest D. C. Liquor Oasis

A clamoring throng last night hailed the end of a 53-year drought in Montgomery County, Md. The first sale of legal liquor passed over the counter in the Silver Spring dispensary at 7:03 p. m.

Washingtonians were well represented in the crowds that jammed in and near the beverage store at 8400 Georgia avenue. Throughout the day they had waited. At frequent intervals assurances were given that the Baltimore truck would arrive "within an hour."

But it was almost 6:30 o'clock before the first shipment hove into sight. A lusty cheer arose from the crowd. At first sight of the labeled bottles, the milling throng pressed forward, and for a time it appeared as though unloading activities would have to cease.

Amid smacking lips and shouts of encouragement, the crew finally carried the last case into the dispensary. Impatient cries greeted stamping and marking proceedings.

John C. Walker, manager of the dispensary and member of the county liquor control board, honored himself with the first bottle. He explained that his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Curtis Walker, of Chevy Chase, had been promised the first quart.

The first sale across the counter went to R. P. Leizcar, Silver Spring contractor. To him went a quart bottle of Old Tom Harding, blended rye, for $3. A short time later he returned to announce he would save it as a keepsake, and bought another one.

Once sales were begun the crowd began to increase. They crushed, laughed and poked their way into the store. A detail of Montgomery County police were

White House Acts When Farm Administrator Asks Showdown.

"Young Liberals" At Seat of Strife

Row Over Price-Fixing and Other Policies Comes to Head.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In an effort to pacify the warring factions in the Agricultural Department, President Roosevelt last night ordered that all codes under the supervision of the A. A. A., except those relating to first processors of foodstuffs, be transferred to the NRA.

President Roosevelt announced his decision in a formal statement after a conference of an hour with George N. Peek, agricultural administrator, who has been at cross-purposes with other officials in the department, including Secretary Henry A. Wallace, Assistant Secretary Rexford G. Tugwell and Jerome Frank, counsel to the A. A. A.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Peek was reported to have said that he would resign unless "radical members of the brain trust" in the Agricultural Department were asked to leave. He evidently referred to Mr. Tugwell, Mr. Frank and Frederick C. Howe, A. A. A. consumers' counsel.

Offer to Quit Denied.

Stephen T. Early, assistant secretary to the President, speaking for Mr. Roosevelt, denied Mr. Peek had tendered his resignation during the White House conference. Secretary Wallace subsequently told The Post that Mr. Peek had said nothing to him about resigning. Asked whether he thought Mr. Peek would resign, Secretary Wallace said:

"There's nothing definite about that."

But whether Mr. Peek resigns or remains as the A. A. A. director, President Roosevelt's action in removing jurisdiction over the A. A. A. codes to Recovery Administrator Johnson was regarded as a distinct rebuff to the agricultural administrator and as evidence that the President had no intention of removing any of the "radical members of the brain trust."

The conflict within the Agricultural Department between the conservative forces, represented by Mr. Peek, and the forces known as the "young liberals" has been raging for some weeks. Except for the liquor codes, which actually have been handled by the President's special interdepartmental committee, this internal warfare has stopped action on all A. A. A. codes.

Grocery Codes Wait.

The retail and wholesale grocery codes have been pending for several months. More than six weeks ago Gen. Johnson had the President approve the NRA code for the retail trade, except food stores. A controversy over price-fixing marked the Long Aids Held Guilty of Fraud

3 Vote Officials Convicted of Certifying False Election Returns.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 6 (U.P.). Three election commissioners picked by Senator Huey P. Long's political machine were found guilty in criminal district court today on charges of certifying false returns from last November's general election. The three were the first of 513 indicted commissioners to go on trial.

The offense is punishable by a jail term of not less than six months or more than one year.

Mass indictments were returned against the commissioners after an open court recount of ballots, which showed wide discrepancies between the actual vote and the official returns.

The votes counted were those cast on 13 amendments to the State constitution, all sponsored by Long. The amendments were beaten in the rural areas, but carried to victory when a landslide majority was reported in their favor in New Orleans.

Duce's Demand To Alter League Aims at Power

France Now Stronger at Geneva, With Major Nations Out.

By Kendall Foss.

With only three of the world's seven great powers maintaining membership in the League of Nations, Mussolini and his Fascist Grand Council decided the cooperative ice was getting a little too thin.

Something would have to be done about it, he felt, and accordingly his grand council resolved late Tuesday night to make further Italian participation in the league conditional upon reform of its constitution, methods, and objectives.

How precisely Mussolini knows what sort of reform he wants is open to question. The reasons which led up to the demand, however, are quite clear. They spring from matter of the relative influence of the big and little member states.

Time was when five out of seven big fellows appeared regularly at Geneva. Only the United States and the Soviet Union were missing—admittedly a gap in the ranks comparable to two front teeth. Even so, the big powers, including Italy, exercised considerable influence when it came to the type of split which finds big against little.

Such a split was the one the Japanese occasioned by their activities in Manchuria. It was the little powers (and France) that wanted to see the league enforce respect for territorial sanctity.

Japan, Germany Out.

Since that time Japan and Germany have withdrawn, making four major nations outside the fold. Great Britain, France and Italy remain.

And France has many more docile friends among the little countries than has Italy. Which is another way of saying that French influence now far exceeds Italian on virtually everything that comes up.

First step toward overcoming this unfavorable set-up was the four-power pact, initialed but never signed by Britain, France, Germany and Italy. Apparently the intent was to superimpose this pact on the league, restoring big power influence and reducing the gap between French and Italian importance. Attempts, so far abortive, to expand the four-power pact into a six-power agreement by including the United States and the U. S. S. R. have the same fundamental purpose.

Despite the vigor of the grand council's resolution, close followers here do not believe that Mussolini has committed himself irretrievably. Making "further participation conditional upon a radical reform of the league, to be effected within the shortest possible time, in respect to its constitution, its functioning, its objectives," may mean a great deal and may equally well be the sort of declaration which can be satisfied by minor adjustments. In short, it is not safe to assume that Mussolini must withdraw from the league unless the whole character of the Wilsonian cooperative effort is changed.

Russia Not Satisfied.

On the other hand it was not for nothing that Litvinoff used Rome as the scene for a new Soviet pronouncement on the League. Almost simultaneously with Mussolini's broadside, Litvinoff declared his country might consider joining if the procedure were altered. "The constitution and organization of the League are not in accordance with our ideas," he added. Undoubtedly, this strengthens the Italian position and gives Geneva reason to think acquiescence might result in a Soviet bid for membership.

No representations looking toward possible American adhesion to a revamped League have been made here, it was said at the State Department. There is small likelihood any will be made at least until League rejuvenation is more nearly a reality.

Reorganization of the League to make it more palatable to nonmember great powers would probably involve doing away with Articles X and XVI. These deal with guaranteeing present frontiers and applying sanctions to recalcitrant members. They were primarily responsible for the American decision not to join.

Upshot of such a reorganization might well result in reducing the League to a purely consultative organization, easier to adhere to and easier to flout.

Four Powers Seek Change.

Fundamentally this question lines up Germany, Russia, Japan, and Italy on one side of the fence as nations interested in revision. France and the little countries are more or less alone in defending the status quo of the League. Britain seems to be atop the fence, the United States definitely in the spectator class.

Great confusion is the result, for the pattern does not at all conform to the political line-up which is gradually becoming clear and which takes its point of departure from the recent, Soviet-German cleavage.

This new abyss has already inspired France to friendly gestures in Moscow, had something to do with American recognition of the Soviet Union, set Italy to wondering whether to smile more broadly on Berlin or the Kremlin, and made England cogitate long and deeply.

Similarly it is responsible for the recent verbal nonaggression pact between Germany and Poland and for the opening of conversations between Berlin and Paris. These conversions, closely guarded, were accompanied by inspired statements to the effect that no real problem (except the Saar, which will be settled automatically in 1935) divides Germany from her neighbor to the west.

It may be weeks or even months before the confusion in the line-ups gets straightened out, and the outlines of the new balance of power become really clear.

Principals in "Brain Trust"—Conservative Conflict consideration of both the NRA and the A. A. A. retail codes. Gen. Johnson brought about a compromise on his code, but nothing has been done about the retail food stores code.

The controversy over price fixing, as well as divergent viewpoints on other matters, came to a head several days ago when it was learned that a score or more of the "young liberals" were threatening to resign in protest against what they regarded as reactionary activities.

President Roosevelt apparently took a hand in this situation as soon as he returned from his Warm Springs vacation. Mr. Peek was summoned to the White House last night, remaining with the President until the latter left at 9:30 p. m. for Constitution Hall to address the Federated Council of Church in Christ in America.

Peek Noncommittal.

On leaving the White House Mr. Peek said he had "nothing to say." Asked if he had tendered his resignation, he said that matter had not come up. When President Roosevelt returned to the White House, after his address, Mr. Early issued the following statement:

"Following a conference tonight with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, George N. Peek and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the President authorized the statement that, for purposes of coordination, all codes under the NRA, including those under negotiation by the A. A. A. will be turned over to the Administrator of the NRA.

"The only exception to this is codes pertaining to the manufacturers engaged in the first processing of agricultural products and the handlers previous to the first processing. This work will be continued under the A. A. A."

Peek, Johnson Old Friends.

Mr. Peek was the only visitor at the White House last night. It was understood, however, that President Roosevelt conferred with Gen. Johnson and Secretary Wallace by telephone and found both agreeable to the transfer of the A. A. A. code authority to the NRA. Mr. Peek, it was said by A. A. A. attaches, long has favored concentrating the formulation and supervision of all codes under the NRA.

Incidentally, Gen. Johnson and Mr. Peek have been close friends for many years. They were associated together in the work of the War Industries Board, and became known as "the boys" of Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of that war-time agency.

Later Mr. Peek became the head of the Moline Plow Co. and when that enterprise fell on evil days Gen. Johnson took over the liquidation of it. Mr. Peek and Gen. Johnson last spring together returned to public life as administrators of the "new deal" codes. Now Gen. Johnson again will undertake to liquidate the work started by Mr. Peek.

Wallace Defines Stand.

Secretary Wallace gave The Post the following statement after the President issued his announcement:

"Our ideas on codes differed from those of the NRA. Our ideas were more strict than those of the NRA, especially in relation to retail stores. It is not fair to treat one class of such enterprises different from another. Consequently it seemed desirable to put the formulation and supervision of all codes under Gen. Johnson.

"Frankly, it did not seem to me that the proposed codes were of any substantial benefit to the farmers. Nor did it appear that they were of any value in our endeavors to bring about a parity between industry and agriculture."

Earlier in the day at a press conference, Secretary Wallace expressed his dissatisfaction with the progress of the A. A. A. codes. Mr. Wallace has leaned strongly to crop reduction methods of bringing about farm relief, while Mr. Peek has put the emphasis on marketing agreements.

This was part of the controversy which has disrupted the Agricultural Department. Mr. Tugwell and Mr. Frank stood behind Mr. Wallace. Although Mr. Frank was Mr. Peek's subordinate, the latter did not select him. He was chosen by Mr. Wallace Mr Peek's choice for the place was Frederick P. Lee, a Washington lawyer and former legislative draftsman for Congress.

Even after Mr. Peek found it impossible to appoint Mr. Lee, it was learned, he employed the Washington lawyer with his own funds to give him legal advice and, to a great extent, ignored Mr. Frank. Mr. Peek also did not see eye to eye with Mr. Howe, although the two were together in opposing price-fixing in the retail food code.

On the other hand, the brain trust members of the Agricultural Department have contended that Mr. Peek has impeded the wheat and corn-hog reduction programs. They also charge him with leniency in dealing with processors, particularly the meat packers.

Clarification Needed.

It was evident last night that the President's statement will have to be clarified to determine what codes the A. A. A. will continue to formulate and supervise. For instance, there was a doubt as to whether the codes for the liquor industry would remain under the A. A. A.

Mr. Wallace said he supposed, under the President's ruling the A. A. A. would retain authority over the distillers' and brewery codes—"much to my dissatisfaction"—but would turn the importers', blenders' and rectifiers' and wholesale distributors' codes over to the NRA. It also was thought that the A. A. A. would continue to have jurisdiction over millers and similar processors of agricultural commodities, but not over commission and middlemen.

Pay Restored 5% In Budget Figures

pected to make whatever moderation in the present slash Labor Department statistics will permit.

Under the law, his order must be for the six-month period ending July 1, and this period is not touched in the departmental estimates on which the House Appropriations Committee is now working.

Representative James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, who bitterly opposed the salary slash in the House last session, yesterday predicted flatly some pay relief in January.

"A careful survey of the salary situation indicates part of the pay cut will be restored January 1, and the entire 15 per cent now deducted will be restored in July," Mr. Mead said.

"This opinion of mine is predicated on action to be taken by the President after he has studied the Department of Labor's cost of living figures."

Three House appropriations subcommittees yesterday were at work on 1935 estimates for the Government's independent establishments and five departments, State, Justice, Commerce, Labor and Navy. Hearings on Treasury-Postoffice estimates will get under way Monday.

Among appropriation committee members who said yesterday they would like to see part of the 15 per cent restored in January and the rest "as soon as possible" were Chairman Clifton A. Woodrum, of the Independent Offices subcommittee, formerly a pay-cut advocate; Rep. John J. Boylan (Democrat), New York, and Rep. William J. Granfield (Democrat), Massachusetts.

Rep. Woodrum said he believed the 1935 appropriation bills should carry sufficient funds to enable the President to restore whatever portion of the cut he sees fit.

Aid of Johnson Gets $6,800 Yearly

Brown, the executive officer, at $7,200.

An insight into the NRA pay roll, denied to newspapermen on the ground that Blue Eagle finances are confidential, was made possible through a demand of Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, for a list of Recovery Administration employes and their salaries.

The local pay roll for the organization is on a basis of $2,642,197 a year.

It includes the Rev. Frederick Vining Fisher, former pastor of the Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, who receives $4,000 a year as a "speaker;" a contingent of "newspaper readers," who comb the press of the Nation for comment on the NRA and its works, at $2,400; statisticians at $2,210; economists at $2,000, and lesser employes who rate as low as $714 annually.

There are 1,332 Blue Eagle workers in Washington, of whom 362 draw more than $2,000 annually. Among the more than 1,000 others are members of Lodge No. 91, A. F. G. E., the new NRA union, who will meet again tomorrow night to press their demands for better working conditions.

Many of the more important officials of the Recovery Administration gave up lucrative positions to help along the good work.

Before becoming a stenographer for the Democratic national committee, Miss Robinson did clerical work for the Business Men's Professional League. Robert K. Straus, who for a time was one of Gen. Johnson's assistants, is generally credited with bringing her to the NRA.

Once on the Blue Eagle pay roll, Miss Robinson's rise was rapid, while Straus, son of the American Ambassador to France, severed his connection with the administration.

Most of the NRA executives and employes believed Miss Robinson to be the general's secretary, but a private NRA directory—not for use outside the office—listed her name yesterday second only to that of the administrator himself, with the title of administrative assistant.

Annual Need For 800,000 Houses Seen

Summary of NRA Survey Indicates Jobs for 4,250,000 Men.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Construction of about 800,000 residences is required annually for the next several years in the United States according to an NRA survey of possibilities of reemployment in the construction field.

A report on the survey outlines construction possibilities totalling nearly $14,000,000,000 over a two-year period. It was estimated 4,250,000 workmen could be employed in this manner.

Two millions, it was said, could be given work on residential units, 1,000,000 on grade crossings, 500,000 on educational facilities, 500,000 on recreation and sanitation construction and 250,000 on subsistence homesteads.

"The large total of unemployed building workers and the heavy drains for their maintenance upon public and private philanthropy justify careful consideration of all possible means of reviving construction," the report states.

Prosperity Peak Adopted.

Estimates of the amount which may reasonably be spent for housing were made in two ways:

1—The ratio of new residential dwelling units to the number of families during the highest consecutive five years of building in the 20's was found, and it was assumed that this ratio of residential construction to families could reasonably be initiated and maintained at the present time as a result of the current shortage.

2. The need for new residential dwellings was calculated on the basis of the increase in urban families, the estimated return of families to the city upon recovery, replacement of abandoned homes, homes burned and not replaced, obsolescence, and estimates on the number of substandard homes in 1929 to be replaced by new construction.

Basis for Estimates.

The figures for the second method of estimate were given as follows, being computed as of January 1, 1934:

1. Increase in urban families since 1930	595,000
2. Return of families to cities	250,000
3. Replacement of abandoned homes	520,000
4. Home burned and not replaced	100,000
5. Obsolescence	340,000
6. Five per cent vacancy allowance for new buildings	90,000
7. Substandard homes in 1929	1,250,000
Total	3,145,000
Deductions:
1 Oversupply of homes in 1930	525,000
2 Homes built since 1930	560,000
Total deductions	1,085,000
Total net need, including replacement of 1929 substandard homes	2,060,000
Less 1929 substandard homes	1,250,000
New facilities needed	810,000

$35,000,000 New Tax Revenue Seen

Robert L. Doughton announced public hearings will begin on the subcommittee proposals late next week, immediately following joint hearings with the Senate Finance Committee on the Administration's liquor revenue bill. The joint sessions will get under way Monday.

Every effort will be made to whip both liquor and general revenue measures into shape before Congress convenes January 3, Doughton said.

Passed over by the subcommittee, but nevertheless favored for future consideration, was a recommendation that all future issues of Federal Government securities be made subject to surtax.

Action was postponed "in the absence of definite recommendations from the Treasury Department on this important matter connected with the fiscal policy of the Government."

There was $22,722,597,530 in interest bearing Federal securities outstanding last August 31, $12,860,055,350 of which was subject to surtax and $9,862,542,180 wholly tax exempt, the committee found.

Amendment Suggested.

L. H. Parker, chief of staff of the joint committee on taxation, advised the committee a Constitutional amendment was "the fairest way" to subject all Federal, State and local security issues to income tax.

Other Constitutional lawyers, including Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, hold no change in the Constitution is necessary.

Parker said there is some possibility "that even under existing law interest on governmental bonds can be reached by an excise tax in the case of individuals or corporations carrying on business."

Outstanding among the 30 minor recommendations made by the subcommittee yesterday was a proposal that taxpayers be forced to report their gambling gains if they desire to deduct their gambling losses.

Under the present practice, many taxpayers make deductions for gambling losses but fail to report gambling gains.

The subcommittee also moved to stop sales or exchanges of property between members of the same family for insufficient consideration, where this is done with the obvious object of taking a loss for income tax purposes.

The report contained a flat recommendation that deductions for estate, inheritance, legacy, succession and gift taxes be disallowed.

Time Increase Asked.

An increase from two to three years in the time income taxes must be legally assessed after filing was asked "to prevent the escape of taxes legally due." A similar increase from two to three years in the statute of limitations, as "a matter of fairness" to taxpayers seeking to recover overpayments, was recommended.

While estimating at least $270,000,000 will be realized if recommended changes are written into the law, the subcommittee concluded:

"When business returns to normal the additional revenue from these changes should be greater.

"In any event, your subcommittee is of the opinion that if the changes proposed are adopted, the income burden will be more fairly borne by all taxpayers with very few opportunities of escape therefrom by legal avoidance. The sooner all persons pay their full share of income taxes the sooner some relief in the existing tax burden may be expected."

Red Tape Balks Prince Georges Liquor Sales

9 License Applications Are Held Up Because Board Lacks Blanks.

Disappointment was felt yesterday in the Prince Georges County Liquor Commissioners' office when applicants were told no licenses would be issued until today. The reason—there were no license blanks.

The blanks, said Henry L. Morris, chairman of the liquor commissioners, could not be printed and mailed from Annapolis in time to accommodate the county's prospective liquor merchants.

Nine applications were received and filed, but none were approved. The official O. K., Mr. Morris declared, would probably be given this morning.

Temporary Licenses.

Certificates will then be given the successful applicants. These will be carried to Brice Bowie, clerk of the Circuit Court, for issuance of temporary licenses. Several of the applicants were said to be ready to open for business at a moment's notice.

The applications included three for "on sale" licenses. They were filed by Philip H. Banville, barbecue stand, Bladensburg; Frank Stoffl, hotel, Oakland, and Joseph A. Moran, restaurant, Colmar Manor.

The "off sale" licenses were filed by Joseph E. Loveless and John A. Johnson, Colmar Manor; Philip Lustine, University Park; Charles Fleishman, Brentwood; Robert E. Joyce, Mount Rainier; Joseph H. Rogers, and E. L. Mahoney, Lanham, Md., and Max Hoffman, Brentwood.

First Load in Today.

Prince Georges County will receive its first legal delivery of liquor to be dispensed at wholesale this morning at 8:30 o'clock.

The supply will come from Baltimore and is described by Capt. J. M. Edlavitch, who will place it on sale at 22 Defense Highway in Bladensburg, as domestic brands. Sixty-nine cases are scheduled to arrive in the morning and 95 cases in the afternoon. A permit has been issued for its sale by the State comptrollers office at Annapolis.

It is said that blended liquor will sell at $1.25 to $2.50 a pint; liquor bottled in bond at $3 to $4 a pint, and gin at $2.50 to $3.50 a fifth of a gallon. Drinks in hotels and restaurants will be sold at 30 cents a glass.

Druggists Ask Rum Sale Right

Claim Prescription Limit Proposed in Distriet Code Unfair.

District drug stores have been made the victims of unfair discrimination by being limited to sale of liquor only through prescriptions in the proposed District code, it was charged yesterday by the Retail Druggists Association of the city.

A brief defending right of druggists to sell liquor as a general commodity will be presented at a hearing on the local code tomorrow.

The druggists association will ask also that zoning restrictions be removed in the case of sale of liquor in drug stores. If they were limited to this restriction it would mean a discrimination against a great many drug stores, it is charged.

Drug stores, under the proposal, would sell liquor for consumption off the premises.

"By such a system for the sale of liquor, it is believed the evils and excesses of preprohibition days can be prevented by natural as well as statutory forces, temperance promoted and encouraged and a system of distribution established capable of supervision with the minimum effort and cost," the brief of the association states.

Dr. Luther Gets N.Y. Nazi Salute

O'Brien and Self-Styled Hitler Agent Booed by 20,000.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—New York's German-Americans, 20,000 strong by the police estimate, packed into Madison Square Garden tonight and booed their disapproval of Mayor John P. O'Brien, Heinz Spanknobel, self-styled Nazi agent, now the object of a search by Federal authorities, and several anti-Nazi hecklers who were ejected by police.

Police anticipated an anti-Nazi demonstration that failed to materialize.

The occasion for the meeting was the 250th anniversary of the arrival of the first German immigrant in North America.

When Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador, entered the Garden with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, the crowd rose and shouted "Heil Hitler!" with arms raised in the Nazi salute. At the end of "The Star-Spangled Banner" Dr. Luther also raised his arm in the Nazi salute to recognize the plaudits of the crowd.

supplies in this country make for unreasonable prices, the F. A. C. A. will expand the present 4,800,000 gallon limitation on liquor and wine imports for the next four months.

The work of issuing temporary import permits neared completion yesterday and Joseph H. Choate, jr., chairman of the F. A. C. A. and one of the two members of the import permit committee, went to New York, leaving the completion of the temporary task in the hands of Ray C. Miller, representing Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Barter for Foreign Trade.

The latter revealed at his press conference that the next step in using liquor quotas for foreign trade bargaining purposes had been taken. He said negotiations opened in London yesterday to lower British trade barriers against American pork. He said the British were aware their share of the liquor business here was at stake.

Mr. Wallace declined to discuss quotas, but said if the British agreed to remove restrictions against American imports, it was probable their quota would be increased. He said that in 1925-26 England bought 21 per cent of the pork used in that country from the United States, but that under existing restrictions this proportion had dwindled to 6 per cent.

The veil of secrecy which hung over the allocation of liquor quotas was somewhat lifted when the Federal Tariff Commission made public figures showing the average annual imports of various types of liquor and wines by countries in the 1910-1914 period. Under the importing code, the minimum quota for any country is to be the annual average volume of liquor and wine imports from that country in this period.

Import Quotas Set.

Thus, the Tariff Commission figures represent the minimum quotas which may be allotted to any country. In addition, quotas will be assigned to countries nonexistent in the prewar period, such as the Irish Free State. Imports of aged whisky for blending purposes from Canada will be permitted outside of the regular quota of liquor for immediate consumption from that country.

The Tariff Commission figures showed the average annual importation of distilled spirits and wines in the prewar period, was 11,900,087 gallons, comprising 3,908,743 gallons of distilled spirits and 7,991,344 gallons of all kinds of wines.

The figure for distilled spirits comprised 569,542 gallons of brandy; 541,006 gallons of cordials, liqeurs and bitters; 1,028,366 gallons of gin; 1,368,107 gallons of whisky and 401,722 gallons of other types of spirits. The wine total included 864,873 gallons of champagne, 5,085,007 gallons of still wines in casks and 2,041,464 gallons of still wines in other containers.

Leading Nations Listed.

Reduced to a four months' allotment, the basis on which import permits now are being issued, minimum quotas for the leading countries would be as follows:

France: 155,000 gallons of brandy, 67,000 gallons of cordials, 257,000 gallons of champagne and 301,700 gallons of all still wines.

United Kingdom: 328,000 gallons of whisky and 230,000 gallons of gin.

Canada: 124,315 gallons of whisky.

Germany: 323,000 gallons of still wines.

Italy: 1,048,741 gallons of still wines and 45,070 gallons of cordials, liquors, &c.

Spain: 361,722 gallons of still wines.

Japan: 159,419 gallons of still wines.

Netherlands: 98,600 gallons of gin.

In the prewar period, imports from Latin-American countries were inconsequential. Now, Argentina and Chile want to have substantial wine quotas set for them in order they may establish natjonal brands in the new American market. The Irish also want a quota separate from the United Kingdom.

Tax Hike Likely.

With the work of bringing the liquor industries under Federal control nearing completion, the President's special interdepartmental committee is now free to turn its attention to the drafing of liquor tax recommendations. This committee already has sent one report to the President, but it is not final. Meanwhile, it appears the present tax of $1.10 a gallon on spirits may be increased to $2.20 or higher.

President Roosevelt is understood to be favorably disposed toward a proposal that the Federal Government allocate a part of the revenue it collects on liquor gallonage taxes to wet States that have not imposed such a tax. This is one of the matters that must be settled before the Administration lays its liquor tax recommendations before a joint session of the Finance and Ways and Means Committee next Monday.

Settin' Pretty

Athenian, Here Aboard a Bike, Seeing World.

Those who are getting rather tired of living day after day in the same city and working day after day at the same desk may well consider the happy case of V. C. Armaos, who arrived in Washington yesterday on a personal tour of the world.

Twenty months ago Mr. Armaos was a newspaperman in Athens. Reporting the daily doings of Athenians palled on him. With more courage than money, he set out to see the world aboard a bicycle. Starting with Turkey, he worked through the Near East and Egypt.

Along the Mediterranean shore of Africa he traveled to Morocco, then crossed again into Europe. After Spain, France and Great Britain, he followed his eyes into Canada and into this country. Since then he has seen the World's Fair in Chicago and most of the Northeastern States.

The trip will take five years, Mr. Armaos estimates.

Thirsty Find Oasis At Silver Spring

finally sent for, and the dispensary was emptied.

Outside they waited. Five or six at a time were admitted to make purchases. By 9 p. m., with the supply almost exhausted, those in charge decided to call a halt. The doors closed—almost in the faces of more than 1,000 disappointed thirsty and hopeful customers.

Bethesda Residents Thirsty.

When residents in the vicinity of Bethesda learned Silver Spring was the only place with a dispensary open, a long and loud protest was sounded. An emergency cargo of 28 cases was sent to satisfy the demand.

The Baltimore truck brought 150 cases of assorted liquors, with an estimated value of $8,000. What remained was being guarded last night by a dozen county policemen.

During the rush a check revealed a large portion of the thirst quenchers were Washingtonians. Backed by the word of Police Chief Ernest W. Brown that they would not be molested, the District residents loaded their automobiles and started home.

One celebrant just couldn't wait, uncorked a bottle and drank freely. He was caught in the act by a photographer.

Old Tom Harding proved the best seller. It went fast at $1.65 a pint. The highest priced blended whisky was Blackstone, at $4.25 per quart. Bonded liquors were selling as high as $7.25 a quart, with the cheapest, Old Taylor, at $6.75.

Open Again Today.

As the sale continued, Charles Y. Latimer, secretary to the control board, announced that so far no license applications have been received from county country clubs. They are the only establishments permitted to sell by the drink.

Dispensary officials declared the doors open again at 9 a. m. today. A new supply is expected—enough to furnish Bethesda and Rockville.

Jersey Drinks Amid Veto War

Confusion Continues After Legislature Overrides Gov. Moore.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 6 (AP).—Liquor flowed freely throughout New Jersey today as a result of the Legislature's overriding Gov. A. Harry Moore's veto of the control act, but confusion continued as the constitutionality of certain features of the law was questioned.

It was on the grounds of constitutionality that the governor disapproved the measure.

D. Frederick Burnett, named control "czar" in the bill, which was in itself asserted by the governor to be unconstitutional because it took from him his appointive prerogative, advised municipal governing boards not to exercise certain powers granted them.

For 11 hours, from the time the eighteenth amendment was repealed until the State Legislature acted early today after an all-night session, the State legally was dry, but liquor flowed freely.

By overriding the veto, the Legislature saved the regulatory system created by Burnett, under which he licenses all manufacturers and wholesalers, and municipalities license retailers.

Australia to Retaliate If Denied Liquor Quota

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The government plans to demand from the United States a "fair" share of liquor imports or to put quota regulations of American motor cars, it was reported today.

It was said that representations would be made to the American Government. Australia for years has sought a market for its wines.

Fairfax Votes Boosting Levy

1 Per Cent Tax to Help Northern Virginia Entice Visitors.

The eleven counties in northern Virginia, east of the Blue Ridge, need publicity to entice visitors, Dan. S. Hollenga, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Alexandria, emphasized yesterday before the board of supervisors of Fairfax County, Va.

He said the chairmen of the boards of supervisors of the eleven counties had perfected a temporary organization for this purpose. Most of the counties already have pledged funds to support such a project, but the organization will not be completed until every county agrees to join the movement, he said. This section offers every sport, and as much recreation and beauty as any other section of the country, in addition to its historical homes and battlefields, he declared.

Under the Virginia law any county is permitted to make a tax levy not to exceed 1 per cent of its assessed valuation for promotion purposes. The Fairfax board voted to include in its next year's budget a 1-cent levy to be used in cooperating with the other counties in the plan outlined by Hollenga.

C. of C. Directors to Meet.

There will be a special meeting of the board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce at 1 p. m. tomorrow in the Kelley Building at Clarendon. Dan Hollenga, business manager of the Alexander chamber, will discuss plans for a campaign to advertise northern Virginia.

Chinese Music Art Explained By Lecturer

Ancient and Modern Airs Given at Recital by J. H. Lewis.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Touching here and there the fringes of a recondite and complex subject, John Hazedel gave a very interesting lecture-recital on Chinese musical art last evening in the Wardman Park Theater, under the patronage of Dr. Sao-ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Minister to the United States. In the brief time at his disposal, he could obviously do little more than touch upon a subject, the elements of which would require hours for the uninitiated to comprehend.

To the Westerner whose conception of Chinese music has been derived solely from the noisy performances in a Chinese theater, the idea of connecting those bangs and squeaks with art would seem a trifle incongruous. There is a connection, but Mr. Levis contends that the ancient classical music of China is as far removed from its degenerate descendant as the chorales of Bach are from a fox trot, or even farther.

Words Fitted to Tunes.

At a period when European music as we know it today had not even begun to develop from the fragmentary lore of Greek modes, music of a highly elaborate type was flourishing in China during the T'ang dynasty, 618-907 A. D. Mr. Levis did not attempt to explain more than a few of the basic ideas underlying its rules of melodic composition, but he sang "Chiang Nan" as a sample of the characteristic T'ang lyric, and "Tan Kwei" to illustrate the song structure of the Sung dynasty, which succeeded the T'ang.

Among other things, he explained that the Chinese composer of ancient times wrote his melody first, according to fixed rules governing the ascending, level, and descending tones, and then fitted his words to the tune. This procedure logically arose from the fact that the Chinese language is one of tonal inflection of monosyllables in contrast to the Western tongues which are polysyllabic with stressed accents.

Into another aspect of Chinese music Mr. Levis pentrated only a few steps when he referred to the macrocosmic philosophy which was the animating principle of the art. It is abvious that a point of view which approaches men through the universal would produce a different type of music than the attitude which views the cosmos through the individual. At this abstruse matter the lecturer merely hinted, and this glimpse was tantalizing.

The contemporary music of China was illustrated both on native instruments and on the pianoforte. For the latter Mr. Levis has composed pieces in which he translates as closely as possible the Chinese idiom in terms of our harmonic speech.

The program was all too short for the interest of those who heard it, but it would take a dozen such hours to elucidate a subject with which the majority of modern Chinese are themselves unacquainted.

Lawyer Upholds Aid To Man Known Guilty

Dr. Charles Stanley White, prominent local surgeon, declared before the Washington Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel yesterday that there is no possible justification for fee-splitting among physicians. The declaration was in answer to a direct question.

Willam E. Leahy, noted Washington attorney, answered in the affirmative when asked "Is it right for an attorney to defend a person whom he knows to be guilty?" He based his contention on the ground that every man is entitled to his "day in court" whether guilty or not.

King Asks Law To Loosen Grip Of Foreclosure

Redemption Period, Court Approval of Auction Sales to Be Sought.

Legislation to provide for a redemption period in all foreclosure cases in the District, and to require court approval of all auction sales of property in default will be sought at the next session of Congress, Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said yesterday.

Need for such legislation was emphasized by charges of Paul J. Frizzell, manager of the local office of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, that individual mortgage holders and brokerage houses here are not cooperating in aiding distressed home owners.

The fact that the local office is experiencing more difficulty than other offices in inducing note holders to accept bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation in exchange for mortgages is expected to result in the setting of maximum redemption periods in the Capital.

Belief also was expressed that a moratorium may be called on all foreclosures here. Washington is one of the few jurisdictions where it is possible to sell property at auction without court authorization.

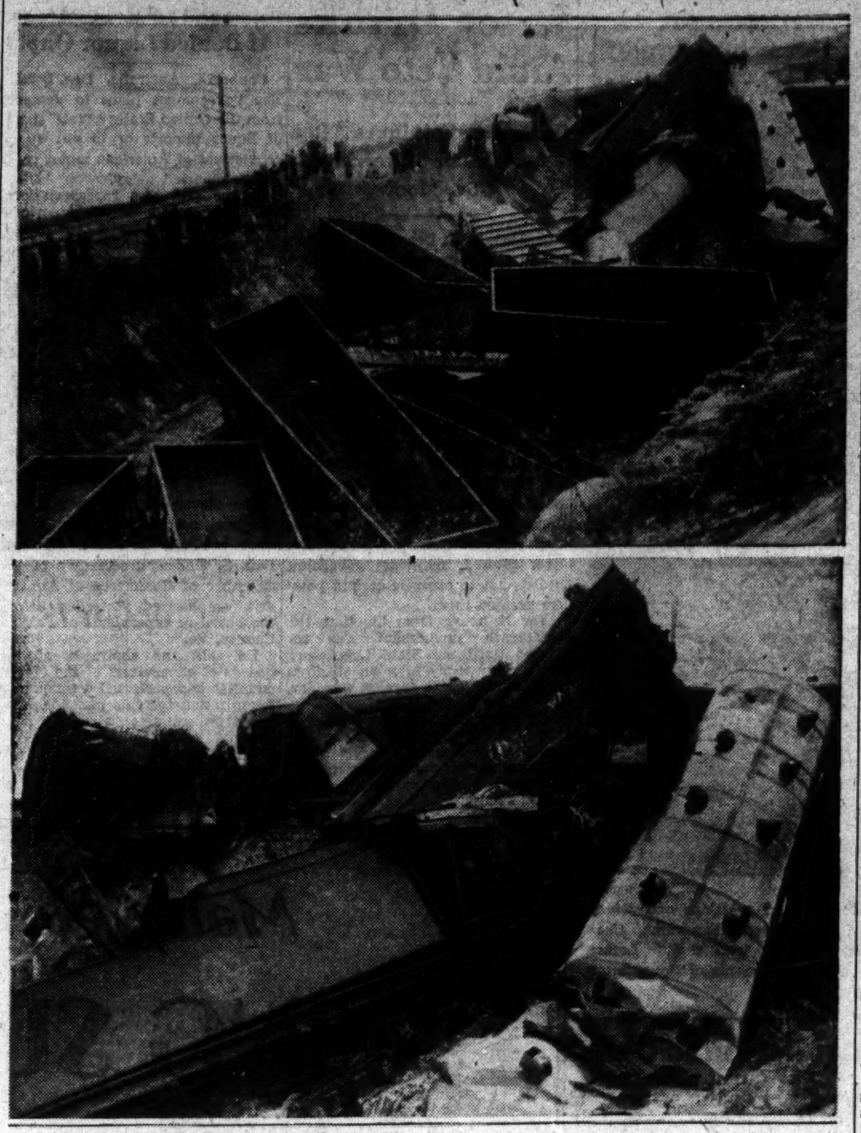
Two Killed in Dual Train Wreck Due to Landslide



Post Staff Photos.

A tangled mass of bent and broken steel remains after the dual train crash at Cherry Hill, Va., yesterday morning. The top photo gives a general view of the wreckage. In the bottom photo the tender of the northbound passenger locomotive is perched dizzily atop the southbound freight engine. The rear of the passenger locomotive, whose crew was killed, is just to the right of the spectators. A landslide wrecked the freight and the express crashed into it.

Lindy Spans Ocean in 16 Hours; Anne First Woman Over Route

The South Atlantic flight, as was the previous flight across the North Atlantic, was part of the survey work the Lindberghs are carrying on for Pan-American Airways, for which the colonel is technical adviser.

The 75 wireless stations of the American International Air Line, which direct its passenger and mail planes on their American flights, kept a close watch for signals from the Lindbergh plane.

As the time for the landing drew near, all radio communication between the airways stations was silenced and the news of the landing was reported through an ether cleared of other wireless messages directly to Miami, whence it was relayed to New York.

Directed by Wireless.

At the wireless instrument, keeping in close communication with Rio de Janeiro through the long flight, sat Mrs. Lindbergh. The skill with which she operated the key was commented on by the experts who listened in on her signals.

She made her reports at regular intervals, and through them the waiting aviation technicians were able to chart a course for the plane which, they said, varied only slightly from a straight line between the taking-off and alighting points.

In Touch From Start.

Within three minutes after taking off from Bathurst Mrs. Lindbergh had established communication with the ring of Pan-American wireless and weather stations which stood watch throughout the night on the western side of the Atlantic.

With rare skill she sent messages throughout the flight, enabling watchers in the Western Hemisphere to keep a log. The first message, addressed to Miami, Fla., 4,100 miles from the reported position of the Lindbergh plane, said, "Pan-American Airways, Miami, departed Bathurst 02:02 Greenwich. Everything O. K. KHCAL (LINDBERGH)."

The schedule called for a position report each hour and a flight progress report every 15 minutes. Mrs. Lindbergh sent her next message from the plane at 3:15 a. m., Greenwich Meridian time, reporting the plane 115 miles southwest of Bathurst. This was addressed to the Pan-American station at Bahia.

A half hour later came a progress report which was merely a terse O. K. Fifteen minutes later came another position report, adding, "All well." By this time the Lindberghs were 230 miles off the African coast. Mrs. Lindbergh reported heavy static, but her dispatches were heard with clarity.

Pan-American radio operators along the airway, listening in, said reception was "fast and clear" and that Mrs. Lindbergh sent "like a professional operator."

At 4:50 o'clock Greenwich meridian time, came the first weather report. This message said they were making 118 miles per hour. Visibility was unlimited and the plane was favored by a 10-knot breeze.

At 5 a. m. came another hourly position report: "950 N., 2015 W., 224 true, KHCAL." At this time the Lindberghs were nearly 400 miles out. Fifteen minutes later they reported altitude at 1,200 feet, visibility 10 miles, sky overcast with a 10-knot wind.

Daybreak caught the plane 600 miles southwest of Bathurst. Scattered squalls and an overcast sky limited visibility to three miles, and a few moments later the Lindberghs announced they were "flying up through clouds, all O. K."

By this time Mrs. Lindbergh found it necessary to use a longer wave. With broadening daylight she also began directing her messages to South American stations instead of Miami.

A little later newspapermen and observers in the New York office of Pan-American Airways were able to listen to Mrs. Lindbergh's signals coming in clearly. The Miami office amplified her 8 a. m. position report and relayed it to New York over long distance telephone.

By noon, Greenwich meridian time, the Lindberghs were 1 degree and 30 minutes north of the equator and 28 degrees, 20 minutes west of Greenwich. The sky was overcast but visibility was unlimited.

Over Equator at 1 P. M.

An hour later they were virtually over the equator, and in another hour well into the southern half of the world. Lindbergh here changed the course of the plane 2 degrees to the west.

By 10 a. m., New York time, the Lindberghs were being called by numerous stations on both sides of the Atlantic, and once they were heard talking to Bissau, Portuguese Guiana, in West Africa.

At 11 a. m., eastern standard time, the big red plane roared over Fernando de Noronha Island, 250 miles northeast of the Brazilian coast.

From then on Lindbergh clicked off the miles with clocklike precision. It became apparent that his speed and course would put him in Natal about 1 p. m., eastern standard time.

Promptly at 12:50 the monoplane soared in from the sea and circled Natal at the mouth of the Totengy River. Mrs. Lindbergh gave the final "reeling in" signal and the colonel swooped down in a perfect landing.

District Inspector Accused of Graft

Paid by Contractor, Says Company Employe.

Charges that a District inspector received 145 gallons of gasoline from a contractor and also received a sum of money weekly during construction of a bridge were filed with the District Commissioners yesterday by Edward C. Zink, through Attorney Richard A. Harman.

The charges were filed by Zink in the course of efforts to get a sum awarded him for injuries suffered at his work. He was time and record keeper on the job, he said. He charged that the inspector who passed on the work received weekly bribes through a false name on the contractor's pay roll.

Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals said the inspector had an excellent reputation.

2 Wrecks in Rail Cut Under Inquiry

among the passenger crew were L. W. Gillis, of Richmond, baggageman, and James Sessions, of New York, porter.

Wrecking crews were working late last night clearing the wreckage from the tracks. Meanwhile trains out of Washington for the South over the R. F. & P., the Seaboard Airline and the Atlantic Coast Line were rerouted over the Southern Railway.

As the freight approached the cut, about 100 feet from the Potomac River, its engineer saw, too late to stop the train, several tons of clay had slid down, blocking the track.

The engineer had barely time to set the brakes and shout a warning to his fireman and brakeman. All three jumped free and escaped with bruises. The locomotive left the tracks, taking ten cars with it, and piled up on the northbound tracks.

In less than 30 seconds, the freight's crew said, the passenger locomotive swung around the curve which leads into the cut, and smashed at full speed into the freight locomotive.

The passenger locomotive climbed over the top of the freight and bounced up 20 feet to the top of the cut. Then its boiler exploded. The four cars which followed the locomotive jammed into the wrecked freight cars.

The two killed were veteran railroad men. Kuhn, with 46 years as engineer, and Jordan, with 28 years as fireman and engineer. It was Jordan's first night on the run.

Some of the injured train men were treated at Fredericksburg, Va., while the others and the passengers were given first aid at the scene. The passengers were brought to Washington by bus.

Removal of D.A.R. Tax Exemption Studied

Removal of the D. A. R. Constitutional Hall from the tax-exempt class of property was under study by District Commissioners yesterday following a report from William W. Bride, corporation counsel, on complaint from backers of the Washington Auditorium that the D. A. R. was renting Constitution Hall for public gatherings to which admission was charged for profit.

The hall is tax exempt under a special act of Congress so long as it is used for nonprofit-making ventures.

Park Police Arrest 237 in November

Traffic Offences Laid to 120, Drunkenness to 39.

Drunkenness was second in the causes of 237 arrests in November, park police headquarters announced yesterday. Violation of traffic regulations led with 120. Others were: Drunkenness, 39; violation of park regulations, 33; speeding, 16; disorderly conduct, 7; investigation, 7; petty larceny, 6; reckless driving, 5; robbery, 3, and assault, 2.

Speeders furnished the greatest number of arrests on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway. Of 35 cases, 10 were for fast driving.

The longest jail term on the November arrest report was 540 days, and the shortest 5 days. Fifty accidents were reported.

Spencer Bliss Selected Head Of Alcohol Unit

Succeeds Dr. J. M. Doran Who Becomes Code Authority.

Capt. Spencer Bliss, veteran tax expert of the Internal Revenue Bureau, yesterday was appointed Commissioner of Industrial Alcohol, succeeding Dr. James M. Doran, by Henry Morgenthau, jr., Acting Secretary of the Treasury, as the first step in the conversion of the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol into a "distilled spirits unit."

Capt. Bliss has been acting deputy commissioner in charge of the miscellaneous tax unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Early in the prohibition era he served as assistant commissioner of prohibition, and helped organize the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol. He is a member of the President's interdepartment liquor committee. Dr. Doran resigned as commissioner to head the trade association and act as code authority of the distilling industry.

While plans for the formation of the "distilled spirits unit" of the revenue bureau still are in the formative stage, it was authoritatively learned that the long-contemplated merger of the Industrial Alcohol and Revenue Bureaus will take this form. Eventually the unit will be headed, as are other units of the revenue bureau, by a deputy commissioner instead of a Commissioner of Industrial Alcohol.

Formal order for the merger of the bureaus was issued by Mr. Morgenthau Monday.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering confirmed the report that eventually it is planned to head up the old industrial alcohol division as a unit of the bureau under a deputy commissioner. It is proposed to term this the "Distilled Spirits Unit," and place it along with the income tax unit, the miscellaneous tax unit and other bureau units.

Under the form of the order consolidating the old industrial alcohol and revenue bureaus, the civil service status of the alcohol unit employes was preserved.

Church Recalls 1783 Services In Alexandria

Old Music and Text Will Be Used in Sunday Celebration.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Historic Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Alexandria, Sunday morning will hold a special 150th anniversary celebration of the Thanksgiving service held in the Episcopal Church, as it was then called, on December 7, 1783, to commemorate the departure of British troops from American soil.

The original service was conducted by the Rev. David Griffith, who not only was George Washington's rector but his personal friend and his chaplain during the Revolution. He was the first bishop-elect of Virginia, but for lack of means to take him to England or Scotland he was never consecrated.

The old vestry book of the church states: "When the news was announced of the final departure of the British from our soil Dr. Griffith conducted a special service on December 7. The ladies of the church decorated the sacred edifice as for a festival occasion. Over the pulpit was suspended a white dove, bearing an olive branch and upon the walls were appropriate words in evergreens. The service was opened by an anthem composed for the occasion and the rector used the words as text from the 128th Psalm, "Yea, thou shalt see thy children's children and peace upon Israel."

Used in Sunday Service.

This old record will be used as a guide in the Sunday service, the present rector, the Rev. Dr. William Jackson Morton, using the same text, reading from the same Bible and standing at the same reading desk within the same chancel, as in the 1783 service.

Around the gallery will be the arms of the Thirteen Original States, in the order in which they ratified the Constitution of the United States. In the center chancel window will be a large evergreen cross, while in the windows at each side will be six-pointed (Christmas) stars in evergreen. The flowers will be furnished by the Chancel Chapter, in the Colonial colors, yellow chrysanthemums and blue delphinium.

The white dove will be suspended above the pulpit and a grouping of United States flags in front of the organ will give a touch of color. The church flag, a blue cross on a white field, hangs from the south gallery over the chancel, and the United States flag hangs from the north gallery.

Old Music on Program.

A special musical program has been arranged by the organist and Blandy, who has studied old records to find those used prior to 1783, and old enough to have been used on such an occassion, as the church record does not specify the anthems and hymns used.

Official Washington will be represented by Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore and his sister, Miss Moore, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern and the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Ickes. Requests for reservations have been received from the national officers and regents of the District of Columbia chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames, the Sons of the Revolution, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Order of the Cincinnati and other patriotic societies.

Alexandria will be represented by the mayor and city council, the chief of police and the chief of the fire department.

Firemen Honor Guests.

A detail of police will be assigned to care for those outside the church, while a detail of firemen will be in the church, the representatives of the old Friendship Fire Company being given the post of honor, as this was the company of which Washington was a member, and gave it the first engine.

John R. Howland is chairman of the reception committee and other members are R. Walton Moore, Representative Howard W. Smith, the regents of the four chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Alexandria, the chairman of the local committee of Colonial Dames and Mrs. William Jackson Morton, wife of the rector.

V. Ward Boswell is chairman of the ushers, who will be members of the vestry, assisted by Armistead L. Boothe, Robert Morris, Thomas Sommers, Lawrence Latane and A. Slater Lamond. Entrance to the churchyard will be by card, members of the church and choir to enter through the parish hall gate.

Parade in Alexandria Feb. 22, 1934, Doubted

Whether Alexandria will hold a parade on Washington's Brithday next year will be decided by the George Washington Birthday Association at its annual meeting in Alexandria Monday night. Officers also will be elected.

For many years the association has held a parade and a banquet on alternate years, the last parade having been in 1932. Contributions from local merchants largely finance the parade cost, and some association members believe gifts would be scarce.

Bill Assures Montgomery Of Blue Laws

Maryland Legislature Also Sees Measure for Bay Span Killed.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 6.—Montgomery County will have a blue law, banning Sunday movies and amateur sports, until June 1, 1934.

This was assured today when the county delegation voted to eliminate an emergency clause from a bill to repeal existing Sabbath acts. The measure then was favorably reported to the House of Delegates and probably will be passed soon.

The emergency clause would have made the proposal effective on passage. Such a provision, however, required a three-fifths vote, more than friends of the legislation were able to muster.

Bridge Bill Killed.

By adopting an unfavorable finance committee report, the Senate definitely killed a bill calling for construction of an $8,500,000 Chesapeake Bay bridge to connect Baltimore with the Eastern Shore. The project would have been constructed with outright Federal grants and loans from the Public Works Administration.

Gov. Ritchie opposed the bridge program, despite protests from the Baltimore Association of Commerce and others. He contended the undertaking might impair State credit.

Most of the House session was spent debating a resolution by Delegate J. A. Love, Washington County, under which the State would have supplied each delegate with $10 worth of stamps for official correspondence. Termed extravagant by administration forces, the proposal was rejected.

Delegate E. Sheldon Jones, Wicomico County, insisted on favorable action.

Raps Use of Militia.

"We need the stamps," he said. "If we don't vote them the money might be spent on another foolish expedition like the one last week. I'd rather spend the State's money on stamps than on troops."

Jones referred to use of militia in arresting Eastern Shoremen after the Armwood lynching.

Increased demand for liquor revenue stamps was reported by William S. Cody, State Comptroller. Orders exceeded $200,000.

House Speaker T. B. Harrington predicted the special legislative session would end Friday.

Widow Gets $5,000 Award for Killing

Walter Hatton Was Hit by Falls Church Officer.

A verdict against Paul Herrman, former town sergeant of Falls Church, Va., for $5,000 was returned in the circuit court of Fairfax County last night in favor of Mrs. Margaret Hatton, widow of Walter Hatton.

Hatton was killed last winter when struck by Herrman's motorcycle on the Lee highway, 2 miles west of Falls Church. Hatton and a friend, in Herrman's car, had gone to investigate an abandoned automobile near Chimney Villa. Herrman, then sergeant, went in search of them and, as he neared the parked cars, struck Hatton.

Mrs. Hatton sued the town of Falls Church and Herrman. Following the verdict yesterday, the suit against the town was dismissed by Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Double Salary Given Fairfax CWA Engineer

Treasurer and Revenue Head Keeps Old Pay; Office Cost Cut.

The salary of F. N. Larkin, former Fairfax County engineer, who has been appointed assistant county civil works administrator in charge of engineering details, has been doubled through contributions of the county school board and the board of supervisors.

Yesterday the supervisors followed the lead of the school board and added $75 to the $150 a month granted by the Civil Works Administration. The school board voted to give $75 a month Tuesday.

The salary supplements were granted on condition that Larkin would supervise all county C. W. A. construction projects, as well as carry on his office duties.

The salaries of the county treasurer and the commissioner of revenue were kept at $4,675 for the new year. Office expenses for the treasurer were cut $300, making the total $6,688. The supervisors refused to grant Mrs. A. H. Chilcott, deputy treasurer, a $300 increase in salary. Extra clerk hire funds were abolished in the commissioner of revenue's office, but he was given another full time deputy, making the total expenses for his office $4,700.

Welfare workers appealed to the supervisors for use of the old county poor farm 1 mile west of Fairfax for possible establishment of a women's conservation camp by the Federal Government. The use of the large building and farm was granted, providing the Federal Government make the repairs without cost to the county.

KNEE-ACTION WHEELS

will make more buyers in 1934

EVERY business—General Motors included—must continually do better or it will fare worse.

For 1934 we have done decidedly better. The 1934 cars are not the 1933 cars improved. They embody a new, different, far-reaching change in motor car design. Engineers describe this by the technical phrase "independent front wheel suspension." We prefer to call it "giving the car Knee-Action Wheels." A glance at the diagrams at the left will explain the reason for this homespun description.

HOW KNEE-ACTION WHEELS WORK

Your present car is stiff-legged. Stiff front springs are rigidly joined by an I-beam front axle. So when you hit a bump the front of the car bounces, the rear pitches, and you are jarred.

See how serenely a man meets a bump. One knee bends easily, lifting its leg. The other leg is not affected; equilibrium is undisturbed. The knee, not the body, takes the jar.

Now, 1934—no more I-beam axle, no stiff springs. The wheel, flexibly mounted on its own soft spring, rises and falls like a knee to soak up the shocks, while the car glides on.

To revolutionize Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Buick, La Salle, and Cadillac,—this is a vast and costly program. But 1934 marks the beginning of General Motors second quarter of a century; it is the year of all years for a great advance.

Your very first mile of travel will tell how real and important an advance has been made. If you are at the wheel you have little to do but set the course—so faithful is the cling of the wheels to the road. In the back seat you experience an increased comfort almost indescribable. You no longer ride, in the old sense of being jolted up and down. You glide—and every nerve and muscle is grateful for the restfulness, the all-around relief of having the wheels, instead of your body, absorb the bump and jar.

Unified Banking.

After a somewhat heated preliminary exchange of views at a session of the Senate banking inquiry, Senator Glass and Winthrop Aldrich ended their discussion on an amicable note. Both men stated that they were in favor of a unified banking system, although Mr. Aldrich believed that a Constitutional amendment might be necessary to obtain it and Senator Glass thought that only a minority favored such action.

The mere fact, however, that a practical banker and a veteran legislator are urging the importance of unified banking shows that the possibility of achieving unity is no longer a remote ideal of theoretical banking reformers.

A great deal has happened during the last few years to convince the people of the United States that an uncoordinated system of Federal and State banks operating under 49 different sets of laws and regulations is an unmitigated evil. The thousands of bank failures that have resulted from the lack of strong centralized control over our banking units, and the steady deterioration of legislative standards which has been the outcome of a struggle between National and State banking systems are matters of common knowledge.

This competition in laxity has been deplored and condemned for a long time by those who realized its dangerous implications. But so long as local bankers exercised a dominant political influence in their respective communities, it seemed hopeless to try to secure Congressional support for a policy looking toward unification. Today conditions are radically different. The political power of these bankers has waned. The depositors who have lost hundreds of millions of dollars and suffered heavy indirect losses from bank failures have become an articulate political force capable of impressing their views upon their representatives in Congress.

Congress would not be disposed to remain obdurate, in all probability, in face of a determined popular demand for a strong unified banking system under Federal control. Furthermore, it is not believed that there are any Constitutional obstacles to prevent the passage of unifying laws. Counsel for the Federal Reserve Board is of the opinion that Congress possesses the power to restrict the business of receiving deposits, subject to withdrawal by check, to National banks.

As counsel said in an opinion prepared in December, 1932, "The existence of a heterogeneous banking structure in which there have been more than 10,000 bank failures during the past 12 years constitutes a burden upon and an obstruction to interstate commerce; and Congress may enact appropriate legislation to correct this condition."

If men of the standing of Senator Glass are ready to lead the fight for unified banking, and if the people are shown why such unification is essential to the upbuilding of a sound, efficient banking system, the necessary reforms will be greatly accelerated.

Action ought to be taken before recollection of the losses and sufferings of the recent past has become dulled and before there is danger that the public may sink into a state of apathy, leaving the banking system unprepared to weather future crises.

The New Incentive.

The quiet and orderly way in which the people of the United States greeted the return of legal whisky indicates strongly that they have no enthusiasm for liquor, per se.

The President admirably stated what The Post believes to be the popular feeling when he expressed the hope that "this return of individual freedom shall not be accompanied by repugnant conditions that obtained prior to the adoption of the eighteenth amendment and those that have existed since." "Failure to do this honestly and courageously," continued the President, "will be a living reproach to us all."

The American people have become not only wiser but sadder through their experience with prohibition. They came to think of themselves under it as a Nation of hypocrites and law-breakers; it was a pretty distasteful and ugly caricature of what they should like to be that was held up to them in the mirror of prohibition.

Both the eighteenth amendment and its repeal were made possible by the votes of a moderate majority, motivated more by a sense of good taste and the instincts of decency than by an excess of conviction or emotion on either side. It was that majority's revolt against the abuses of "personal liberty" and the stupid resistance to temperance measures that brought about the enactment of a National law. It was that majority's revolt against the hypocrisy, corruption and spirit of lawlessness engendered by the amendment that brought about its repeal.

That majority has not changed its attitude toward liquor; it has changed only its approach to control of it. The goal is the same that we had 15 years ago. The incentive has undergone some modification. In addition to becoming a temperate Nation, we should like to recapture the self-respect we lost during the experiment.

Italy's Shrewd Move.

There is nothing unexpected in the decision of the Fascist Grand Council that Italy will remain a member of the League of Nations only if its constitution is "radically reformed in the shortest possible time." It is the situation underlying that decision, which lends it far more than obvious importance.

The resignations, within the current year, of Japan and Germany, coupled with a certain lukewarmness toward "the Geneva spirit" on the part of the present British government, have made France the dominant power in league councils. The more this dominance is capitalized, particularly among the relatively weak nations of eastern and southeastern Europe, the more Mussolini's policy of complete equality with France is jeopardized.

To this must be added the indirect loss of prestige suffered by Italy as a result of German withdrawal from league membership. On numerous occasions in recent years these two powers have acted in concert at Geneva. Since Hitler's repudiation of the league this concert has been broken, to the diplomatic disadvantage of both parties.

Without using so derogatory a word as "bluff" it is, therefore, apparent that the decision of the Fascist Grand Council must be regarded against a background in which the political rivalries of France and Italy are a salient characteristic. Not least among the misfortunes to which the league ideal has been subjected is this tendency to use the Geneva mechanism as a football in the unending play and counterplay of European diplomatic rivalries.

Italian policy in this particular instance, however, is strongly fortified by the fact that fundamental revision of the league's constitution, or "covenant" as President Wilson had it named, is being urged by many neutral students and well-wishers of the organization. During the present troubled year it has become apparent to league officials, as well as outsiders, that the covenant as drafted in 1919 has failed to harmonize with the political realities of the post-war world. The "sanctions articles" (numbers 16 and 17) are, for example, obvious dead-letters.

The fault for this situation is not necessarily to be attributed to President Wilson and his colleagues in the drafting of the covenant. The league's organic act was written on the assumption of membership by the United States. The adverse decision of the Senate confronted the new-born Geneva organization with the alternative of writing a completely new constitution, or of carrying on in the hope that it might eventually live up to the covenant as written, even without American membership.

This year's events have shown the futility of the latter course. It is now apparent that the league's prestige would be helped, not harmed, by openly dropping many of the pretensions of its present constitution and rewriting the document along more practical, and less contentious, lines of international cooperation. Many believe that such a revision would assist closer cooperation in the practical work of Geneva by both the United States and Russia, to say nothing of resumption of membership by Japan and Germany.

Mussolini has shown on many occasions that he need offer no apologies for his diplomatic abilities. The edict that continued Italian membership in the league will be conditioned on reform in its "constitution, working system and objectives" may prove to be not the least far-reaching of his moves.

Ireland's Crossroads.

The breach between the Irish Free State and Great Britain has been widening steadily since President de Valera took control of affairs at Dublin. Events of the last few days bring their controversy nearer to what appears to be an inevitable climax.

Mr. de Valera has been hinting for several months that the final step toward Irish independence might be taken. He wished to know, however, whether such action would be regarded in London "as cause of war or other aggressive action."

In reply to his note Great Britain has refused to state in advance what her policy would be if Ireland should attempt to put the de Valera plan into effect. J. H. Thomas, the dominion's secretary, simply informed the Free State president that his majesty's government "can not believe that the Irish Free State government contemplates final repudiation of their treaty obligations in the manner suggested."

The Free State policy is becoming increasingly aggressive. In addition to abolishing the oath of allegiance to the British crown and refusing to pay land annuities due to Britain under the treaty of 1921, Mr. de Valera takes the position that the Anglo-Irish treaty was accepted because it was the only alternative to immediate war; that it does not constitute a final settlement of the historic Irish problem, and that the Irish people are associated with the commonwealth against their own will.

Yet President de Valera is proceeding cautiously with his campaign for an Irish republic because he is confronted by the formidable opposition of Gen. O'Duffy's United Ireland Party in the Free State and almost the entire Parliament of Ulster.

The delicate situation of the northern Irish counties, which still remain loyal to the British crown, is the chief dilemma in the present controversy. President de Valera would not be satisfied with conversion of the Free State into a republic. He speaks of union for the Irish people under a government of their own, thus including Ulster in his aspirations. A recent election in northern Ireland emphasized the hostility of the people to the de Valera plan. Great Britain, of course, feels obligated to protect Ulster from any coercion from Dublin.

This situation doubtless made a positive answer to Mr. de Valera's note seem impractical to the British ministry. If the Free State had been advised that no aggressive action would follow "a decision of the Irish people to sever their connection with the commonwealth," the Free State republicans might have construed the answer as a carte blanche to include Ulster in the proposed republic.

British policy leaves southern Ireland virtually free to shape its own affairs. There are indications that the London government would not interfere with a secession of the Free State from the commonwealth, although such a move would be deeply regretted. But an Irish republic without Ulster would not be satisfactory to Dublin, and an Irish republic with the forcible inclusion of Ulster doubtless would lead to trouble. This is the crux of the problem which once more is arousing the bitterness and antagonism of former years.

Another factor that may exert considerable influence in the final outcome of the Irish independence movement is the economic results of the de Valera isolation policy. The Free State is a tiny country that is far from being self-sufficient. Britain's tariffs against Irish cattle and farm products have imposed a real hardship upon the people. It remains to be seen whether they will decide in favor of independence, political dissension and economic unrest or retention of membership in the commonwealth with more adequate export markets.

Drawing the Net.

Her high courts having twice held that Samuel Insull could not be extradited to face charges in the United States, Greece now is making a left-handed gesture to allay the State Department's displeasure over her refusal to honor treaty obligations.

The former utilities magnate will be refused extension of his leave to remain in Greece after January 1 and will be furnished a laissez passer, which is simply a request by the Greek government that he be granted entrance into any other country to whose authorities it may be presented.

If Insull gains admission to a nation with which we have an extradition treaty, the United States will be in position to renew its request with the expectation that it will be granted. If he applies to a nation with which we have no treaty—and there are several—it becomes a matter for that country to determine whether it will refuse him asylum, or grant it at the risk of incurring the displeasure of the United States. In view of the fact that Greece has found it desirable to be rid of the problem he poses for her government, it is hardly likely that Insull will be warmly welcomed elsewhere.

Although the action of the Greek government is indirect and does not satisfy our complaint against its refusal to honor the extradition treaty, it begins to appear that Insull, like his brother Martin, whom a Canadian court has ordered back to this country, may yet be compelled to return to the United States.

Mount Vernon.

Thousands of visitors who come to Washington on short excursions have been denied the privilege of seeing Mount Vernon because that historic estate has remained closed to the public on Sundays. Likewise a considerable number of residents here never have seen this magnificent site. These people will be grateful to the Ladies Association for its decision to open Mount Vernon to visitors for two hours on Sunday afternoons.

The association which restored the estate to its original beauty and made it accessible to visitors from all parts of the world has guarded Mount Vernon with the utmost care. Some of the buildings have been reinforced recently to protect them from damage.

The action of the Ladies of Mount Vernon is new evidence of their desire to meet the wishes of the public.

Answering Criticism of the Grand Coulee Project.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Frank Lee, of Spokane, Wash., makes the statement in a recent letter that because of the high tax rate of the State of Washington, the revenue to be derived from Coulee Dam would benefit only a small minority. He also says that it seems strange that an administration that is paying a bonus to cut down certain crop-acreage should contemplate such a development. Just what the rate of taxation has to do with the benefits to be derived from the dam is not apparent, and the letter gives a wrong impression which I should like to correct if possible.

It will take ten years to complete the Coulee Dam and fifteen more to absorb the electric power which it will produce. The irrigation project of the development will not begin until 1958. Who knows whether or not there will be overproduction of farm crops at that time? In the meantime the dam will be paying for itself through the sale of cheap electricity, and enriching the State through the growth of manufacturing enterprises.

Mr. Lee regards reduction of taxes as the greatest need of the State because the rate is higher than in some other places. Perhaps he does not know that his State has the second highest literacy rating in the country and that the State government recently took over the financing of the schools after property taxation failed to keep them going. Evidently Mr. Lee does not appreciate Washington's fine school system, or its wonderful roads or its generous support of the unemployed, and should try living in some other States where taxes are almost as high, but social conditions deplorable. Nor does he seem to appreciate the fact that the employment of men on the dam will make it possible for many people to pay taxes who could not do so before, and that it will take thousands off the relief rolls.

The Grand Coulee project is designed to save the greatest natural power resource in the country, not only for the State, but for the whole United States. It is providential for the State that the administration is financing its development at this time and it ill becomes a Washingtonian to oppose it with misleading half-baked statements in an Eastern newspaper.

Roosevelt for "Greatest Good to Greatest Number."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Both the dominant parties to some extent are split, some for Wall street and the gold standard, some for Roosevelt and his policies. There can be no doubt in the minds of thinking men as to where the workers should stand. Behind Roosevelt to a man. Things today are happening fast. The next few weeks may easily be the most important in our country's history. And in my estimation the people's attitude as a whole will swing the balance either way. If they stand up like men behind Roosevelt for the interest of the man on the street, things will be well in America. If not, the moneyed interests will again prevail, not for the sound dollar as they claim, but for the interest bearing dollar on national loans. It is an old story: 4,000 years ago the Assyrians adopted the five-day week to take up the slack of unemployment, even as we have done, and it was forgotten.

If the Roosevelt policies for the man in the street do not stick in this twentieth century, it will be because the people did not rally to Roosevelt's clarion call to organize for their own welfare. It will be because the men of 1933 are weaklings, and did not join the union of their craft. Workers should be the last to criticize seeming failure in some of the things Roosevelt aimed at. Men like Roosevelt could, I believe, face lion-like difficulties in their path, but must despise the cur at their heels with selfish destructive criticism and trickling away of their economic and political power in many minority party channels and dual labor organizations. Concentration behind Roosevelt for his clear vision and desire to help the helpless might remake America for the greatest good to the greatest number. If the same elements that elected him, Progressive Republicans, Democrats, Labor and minority party members rally to his call, we can again make America God's country.

Mr. Conboy's Qualifications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your very proper comment upon the appointment of Martin Conboy as United States attorney for the City of New York needs a little clarification. I do not think that any man is better versed in New York City's political personages than I. Surely, nobody occupies a more uniquely detached and impartial position with respect to those individuals, to whom I owe nothing, and from whom I want nothing.

Mr. Conboy has, for years, been one of the ablest lawyers in the country. He is a free, independent fighter. No faction in New York—Tammany or its enemies—can label him. It will be a personal sacrifice for him to accept public office. He has served many kinds of clients and he has served them well. That he served as counsel for Albert H. Wiggin, late head of the Chase National Bank, means no more in his professional career than would the designation by a court for him to serve as free counsel for a pauper criminal defendant. He would serve the latter for nothing with all of the conspicuous ability that marks his entire record.

Mr. Conboy is one of the Nation's ablest and cleanest lawyers. Any attempt to prevent his confirmation would be a most serious reflection upon the intelligence of the men who made it.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Francis Thompson

The poetry of Francis Thompson, written mainly in the last decade of the nineteenth and first few years of the twentieth century, is as certain of immortality as that by any author in his time. His most famous poem is "The Hound of Heaven;" before reading it, one should read attentively the 139th Psalm. The kernel of religious thought is not that man seeks God, but that God seeks man; one does not often see on the street a child looking for its father, but one often sees parents looking for their children. This is the idea of "The Hound of Heaven." It is vain to fly from God, even as St. Paul tried in vain to do before his conversion. Although this particular poem is Thompson's best-known work, there are three of his short poems that I like equally well if not better.

Lilium Regis (The Lily of the King), which contained an astonishing prediction of the World War; "The Veteran of Heaven," a battle cry, one of the most passionately mystical poems in our language, and "In No Strange Land," which was found among his manuscripts after his death.

Thompson lived in the streets of London in the direst poverty and ill-health; he knew the very worst of human specimens and the very worst conditions in which they lived. But in his wanderings through the slums he was accompanied by invisible seraphim; he believed that the angels of God were all about us. Charing Cross was as near to heaven as Palestine.

Boys Never Tease a Bulldog Unless He Is Handicapped by a Fence

By Robert Quillen

When big-town bandits rob a country bank, the average citizen says: "Well, it didn't cost me anything. The insurance company takes the loss."

But taxpayers aren't insured. And one State that has records of such matters reports that every stolen dollar costs the taxpayer four. That is, the cost of catching and trying the criminal and supporting him in prison is approximately four times the amount he stole.

If he isn't caught, each new robbery enables him to buy faster cars and better artillery to cover more territory with less risk of capture.

Thieves are prospering now and nobody knows how much they cost the Nation each year. Official estimates vary according to the items included, but the lowest estimate is $5,000,000,000.

That is a heavy toll in times like these.

When the Government began to distribute the sum of $3,000,000,000, economists said it would make times better for everybody. If an extra $3,000,000,000 can make times good, isn't it evident that the loss of $5,000,000,000 every year has some effect in making times bad.

Somebody pays that bill. And in one way or another you do your part.

Is there no way to destroy the ever-growing army of bandits? Not under the present system. Any man can buy a gun and steal a car, and thus equipped he can terrorize the countryside and laugh at the law.

But experience has shown that there is a way to defeat criminals if the people will take enough interest to demand protection.

Experienced yeggmen of pre-war days avoided two States—one where criminals were whipped and one where prisoners worked in the mines. Today the professionals avoid chain-gang States.

It is evident, then, that punishment does prevent crime if it is the kind of punishment that criminals fear.

Another significant item is the fact that burglary insurance is lowest in States that have the best constabulary.

Sheriffs are relics of horse-and-buggy days—helpless at the county line. Fast cars necessitate a new system—State or Federal constabularies, unhampered by politics and better armed than the bandits.

The criminal will be less bold when officers can follow him everywhere and the punishment in store is one that he dreads.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

I THINK it should be developed whether the much-heralded discontent of the Young Liberals in the Administration applies to Young Liberal Rainey, speaker of the House. He is one of them, you know.

BARGERON.

I don't mean to say he sits in their councils and helps them evolve their things. There is so much they think that he couldn't possibly do this. And it is doubtful whether they would recognize him off-hand were you to mention his name to them. Second thought on their part would recall, however, that the Speaker after all has been doing his little chores, that on the fringe he has been quite helpful to the cause.

• • • •

THE position of the Speaker in the new set-up of Government is right pathetic, in fact, and when you come to think of it there is a lot of pathos in the positions in which other leaders of the Senate and House find themselves. Ordinarily you would think these leaders would be men of considerable influence with their party in power, that theirs would be the names emblazoned in the press. Unquestionably they look forward to this over that long period since Woodrow Wilson. It was the expectation of coming into their own some day that spurred them onward as members of the minority.

Then when they get in, or rather when their party comes into power, they find themselves subordinated by a crowd we had never heard of before.

IT'S the brain trust doing this, and the brain trust doing that, every day in the papers. Seldom does any one give ear to what the party leaders are thinking, or pay concern to their plans, if any.

The truth is, party leaders on Capitol Hill play little part in calculations of the Young Liberals. It is only occasionally that, having evolved some plan, it occurs to them it must be acted upon by Congress. Many of their plans do not have to be because of the virtual dictatorial powers given to the President at the last session and the assumption of them at other times.

But when something is worked out that must receive legislative sanction the Young Liberals look upon this as a mere matter of routine. That the Congress is a part of their making over the Government; that it is an assistance or a contributory influence in the revolution, they do not think for a minute.

• • • •

THE Speaker is doing his bit, though. He should receive their recognition. They should invite him to some of their dinners, their little get-togethers. It is not that he could contribute to their thinking. He would never have an idea for them. But he could sit around and listen and he would feel his work was not wholly unappreciated.

And his little chores are helpful. The little things he does, I think, are an essential part of the whole.

What he does, of course, is to issue a statement every time some of the Young Liberals' handiwork gets under fire. He issues a statement that the procession will go on.

• • • •

THE Young Liberals must have somebody to do this. To be a member of their movement in good standing does not require that one sit and think with them, that he contribute to their thinking councils.

There must be some one to do the outside work. Just as the great industrial plants have inventors to invent their wares and salesmen to sell them, I think the Young Liberals should realize they must have outside men.

Of course, they could never have the respect for the speaker that they have for each other and themselves, but he is, after all, doing his bit. He is one of them, in fact.

THE BEGGAR

They mark me by the coat I wear and never glimpse my dreams.
They never seem to see the pain beneath these ragged seams.
I'm just another man to them who pass along the way
Who may have had a business once but failed to make it pay.

They see the grime upon my face,
my features drawn and thin,
But not the thoughts that fill my brain when night comes sweeping in.
Sometimes they hear the words I say and give a dime to me,
But that great hope I'm cherishing
I know they never see.

They pass me by with just a glance upon my shabby dress.
I think they've seen too many men who've made of life a mess.
And so they treat us all alike and never stop to think
That some of us are slaves to fate and not the slaves to drink.

They never see the throttled pride that lumps my aching throat;
They only see my cold blue hand,
my thin and tattered coat.
With "yes" or "no" they pass me by and nothing I can say Convinces them how hard it is the beggar's role to play.

New U. S. Board To Coordinate Relief Efforts

Agency to Form Council in Every County of Nation.

To coordinate all local activities of the recovery program, President Roosevelt yesterday announced creation of another huge governmental agency which will supplant all existing voluntary boards.

By executive order he set up a National Emergency Council, composed of four cabinet members and the heads of relief administrations, which immediately will begin to organize local councils for every county in the Nation under State directors.

These county councils, it was explained at the White House, will take the place of the numerous local committees created by the various recovery administrations "and will thus effectively consolidate and coordinate the field activities of the Government.

F. C. Walker Director.

As acting executive director the President named Frank C. Walker, executive secretary of the President's Executive Council and treasurer of the National Democratic Committee. Announcement of the new organization followed a meeting Tuesday of the executive Council, many of whose members form the National Emergency Council.

While the primary purpose of the new agency was explained to be that of supplying information by which citizens may obtain help under the many new relief organizations, the emergency councils also will have various other functions such as adjusting controversies involving the NRA and A. A. A.

Advisers to President.

Members of the National Emergency Council, which will serve in an advisory capacity to the President and operate under his direct supervision, will be the Secretaries of Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor, the administrators of Agricultural Adjustment, Federal Emergency Relief and Industrial Recovery, the chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and a representative of the NRA Consumers' Council.

Aware of the duplication of relief machinery which has bewildered the average citizen seeking aid from any one of a dozen governmental agencies, the President felt the time had come to substitute a National information system for the numerous voluntary boards and committees. Chiefly affected will be the NRA, which last night issued an explanation of the changed arrangement.

The council will set up in Washington a bureau to convey to the public "all factual information" on Government agencies, a White House statement said. It was authoritatively stated, however, that it would not use propaganda to bolster the recovery program.

The new Emergency Council was created under authority of the N. I. R. A., declaring the existence of a National emergency, and will be supported from the appropriation contained in the recovery act, beginning with an allocation of $10,000. The executive director is empowered to appoint, subject to the President's approval, but without regard to Civil Service laws, all officials and employes necessary to its operation.

Order Dated November 17.

The Executive order, dated November 17, abolishes "all volunteer field agencies" established under the emergency legislation, effective 30 days from date of the order. It also provides that the council take over all functions performed by the surplanted agencies or considered necessary by the executive director.

All local committees of the NRA, including local and State recovery boards, will be abolished by the change, with the exception of local compliance boards. The compliance boards will continue until a permanent system has been developed, it was explained by William H. Davis, National Compliance Director.

In each State, Mr. Davis said, an adjustment board composed of representatives of the public interest, industry and labor, will assist the State director. In cases where there is no authorized agency of industrial self-government, complaints will go to the State director, then to the State adjustment board, the NRA headquarters here, and the National Compliance Board, if no adjustment is made.

Local Committees Outgrown.

The NRA, entering another phase of its development, has outgrown the use of local committees, it was believed. President Roosevelt's reemployment agreement expires at the end of the year and this, coupled with the progress in bringing all businesses under codes, is thought to have led to the decision to abolish the local committees in favor of a central council.

Mr. Walker said he would use his present offices in the Commercial National Bank Building for temporary headquarters of Emergency Council, pending selection of larger quarters. The White House announcement said he had been asked to serve "for the time being and until a permanent executive director is appointed." Salary of the executive director is not to exceed $10,000.

Concurrent with announcement of the new set-up, details of which have not been worked out, President Roosevelt let it be known that he feels the Civil Works Administration, another comparatively recent agency, is doing much good by engendered enthusiasm throughout the Nation. He is confident 3,000,000 men will have been given work by Saturday, and 4,000,000 by December 15.

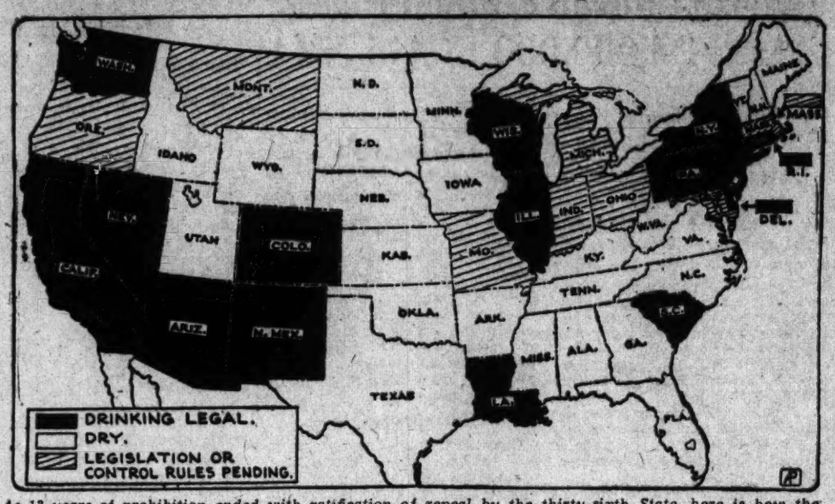
How Various States Stood as Repeal Came



As 13 years of prohibition ended with ratification of repeal by the thirty-sixth State, here is how the Nation stood on the liquor question. In 16 States spirits could be drunk legally, although under varying conditions ranging from "over the bar" to home consumption. In 24 others sale and drinking was illegal, while in the remaining eight the Legislatures or commissions were working on control rules. Utah, No. 36, in the State line-up, can't even have 3.2 beer until January 1, and its Legislature must repeal the State law before harder liquors become legal.

Sen. Long's Congress Winner Offers to Run Again for Peace

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 6 (AP).—A soft-spoken woman past middle age, who never made a public speech in her life, today threw consternation into Louisiana politics by offering to cancel her disputed victory in yesterday's Sixth District Congressional election and run again in a primary in which all aspirants for the post would be given equal footing on the ticket.

In a surprise statement, which left her friends and foes alike stunned with amazement, Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, put up and elected as "the unopposed nominee" by the State administration and Senator Huey P. Long, said she acted to restore peace in her district, scene of riotous antiadministration demonstrations for the past eight days.

"I find myself, through no fault of my own, enmeshed in a factional campaign," said Mrs. Kemp, widow of the Sixth District representative who died six months ago, "and so in opposition to the judgment and wishes of my political advisers, and in spirit of compromise to the end that we may have peace, I have submitted a proposition which I pray may be accepted."

The proposition, briefly, was that she would resign from the Congress seat to which the administration declared she was elected yesterday, on condition that the protesting citizens of her district could in turn cancel plans for holding "a citizens popular election" for Congress December 27. Then, she proposed that all candidates for the Sixth District seat should go into the race together through the routine procedure of elimination primaries and a general election.

Both Senator Long, who threw the full support of his political organization behind her candidacy, and Gov. O. K. Allen, who called yesterday's sudden election without allowing time for a primary, denied themselves to interviewers after the Kemp statement, which Mrs. Kemp made clear was issued on her own initiative.

State authorities, however, continued to compile yesterday's slim vote in the district, with indications that only about 5,000 persons had voted on the ticket which contained only the name of Mrs. Kemp. All of the district did not participate, but the 5,000 votes were cast in an area with a normal voting strength of more than 45,000.

New Demand on Governor.

As Mrs. Kemp offered her compromise from the home of her son in New Orleans, the Sixth District citizens election committee, which branded the Kemp election procedure as illegal, made a new demand on Gov. Allen for the calling of a regular election, which would allow time for primaries and an opportunity for candidates to run.

The committee, referring to yesterday's procedure as a "fake election," said they had "challenged the governor to give the voters of the district the opportunity to choose a representative."

The committee said that if the governor failed to act, it would proceed with the December 27 "citizens' election," in which all candidates, including Mrs. Kemp, were invited to run and were promised "a fair count of the ballots."

Mrs. Kemp was made the center of a bitter factional dispute a week ago when Gov. Allen, who had allowed the Sixth District Congress seat to remain vacant six months, suddenly called a special election for December 5. As his proclamation allowed no time for a primary, the Long-controlled district Democratic committee met immediately and named Mrs. Kemp as "the unopposed nominee" of the party.

Protesting demonstrations swept the district, climaxed by effigy burning and seizure and destruction of ballots and ballot boxes. Antiadministrationists called on the voters to stay away from the polls and await the "citizens' election" on December 27.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Gov. O. K. Allen informed leaders of rebelling citizens in Louisiana's Sixth Congressional District tonight that he was willing to call another election for April 15, if Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, sr., would resign the seat in Congress she won in yesterday's tumultuous election.

Legge Buried; Gift Revealed

Harvester Head Leaves $500,000 for Farm Foundation.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—Funeral services for Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester Co, and former chairman of the Federal Farm Board, were held today at the Fourth Presbyterian Church here.

The Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson, pastor, conducted the service, assisted by Dr. Wilfred A. Rowell, pastor of the Union Church at Suburban Hinsdale, where Mr. Legge lived.

The factories, offices and branch offices of the International Harvester Co. throughout the United States and Canada were closed for the day.

Following services, former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, disclosed Mr. Legge had made a $500,000 bequest toward formation of a "farm foundation" to be devoted to the general welfare of the agricultural population of the United States.

The bequest, Lowden said, was in addition to previous gifts totaling $400,000.

Republicans Nominate Representative's Widow

Sidney, N. Y., Dec. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Marian Clarke, widow of Congressman John D. Clarke, was selected tonight as the Republican nominee to fill out his unexpired term as Representative from the Thirty-fourth Congressional District. Nomination is considered equivalent to election, since the district is overwhelmingly Republican.

Florida Ship Canal Favored

President Willing to Back Project if Depth Is 50 Feet.

President Roosevelt favors construction of a ship canal across the northern part of Florida if it can be done on a self-liquidating basis, it was learned at the White House yesterday.

A preliminary survey by the War Department showed that original plans for a 35-foot canal would prove too expensive, the President felt, and he has asked estimates be prepared on a 30-foot waterway, believing such a canal would be self-supporting.

An expenditure in the neighborhood of $135,000,000 was estimated for the 35-foot waterway, which would connect with other coastal canals. The project was discussed Tuesday with Senator Fletcher, of Florida.

Concerning creation of a Missouri Valley authority similar to the T. V. A., as proposed by Senator Norris, the President was understood to feel the project is so large it requires further investigation.

Long Denies Chase Man Aided Bank Bill Fight

New Orleans, Dec. 6 (AP).—Senator Huey P. Long today denied that C. S. McCain, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, had "given any assistance to the fight made by himself and other senators against the Glass banking bill in the early part of the year."

The statement was in reply to charges by Senator Carter Glass at the Senate banking inquiry yesterday that McCain had been in constant communication with Long during the fight against the bill.

Police Save Dog Marooned on Tidal Basin Piling.

The Metropolitan and U. S. Park Police departments combined yesterday to rescue a dog marooned on a piling in the Tidal Basin.

A passerby, noticing the dog's plight, promptly telephoned park police and the metropolitan's harbor precinct. By foot, motor and boat uniformed rescuers swarmed to the scene. The harbor precinct's police boat was abandoned in favor of a canoe. After some consultation the animal was removed from his perch.

The shivering dog was transferred to a boiler room near the Navy Building to dry out.

Fretting Man Admits Holdup.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Burdened by a guilty conscience, Richard L. Riley, 28, Chicago, walked into police headquarters here today and confessed he participated in a robbery near Kilbourn, Wis., August 8, 1932, in which a roadhouse proprietor was killed.

Senators Seek Teeth in Laws To Curb Crime

Universal Fingerprinting, Check on Gun Sales May Be Asked.

A special Senate committee investigating racketeering will meet next week to draft sweeping recommendations, perhaps incorporating proposals for a Federal firearms law and universal fingerprinting.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the racketeering committee that held hearings last summer in Chicago and New York, disclosed last night the committee is prepared to make drastic proposals in its forthcoming report.

Senator Copeland said there was strong sentiment among the members for a law requiring all citizens to be fingerprinted as a crime-prevention measure.

He believes the committee is certain to ask a broad expansion of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, recently active in a Nation-wide drive against kidnaping.

He believes a stringent Federal firearms law, supplementing State and local legislation in making gun sales more difficult, would do much to check crime.

Senator Copeland disclosed that the following additional recommendations, some of which would require legislation by the States, will be considered by the subcommittee:

Provision for the return of fugitive witnesses. (Although criminals can be extradited under present laws, return of witnesses can not be forced.)

Extension of the Dyer act to interstate shipment of all stolen goods.

Making false evidence before district attorneys punishable under perjury laws.

Elimination of the "unanimous jury."

Investor Sues Bank for Loss

$1,500,000 Sought From City Company of N. Y. by Chicagoan.

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—A suit seeking approximately $1,500,000 damages as the result of investment losses, was filed in the Federal District Court late today on behalf of Joseph P. Rend, wealthy Chicagoan, from the City Co. of New York, Inc., formerly known as the National City Co.

Rend is a brother-in-law of Charles E. Mitchell, former president of the National City Bank, who recently was acquitted of charges of income tax law violation in New York. Rend testified for Mitchell at his trial.

The bill, filed by Attorneys Clarence Darrow and Walter E. Beebe, alleged Rend had purchased from time to time, beginning in 1929, a total of 6,000 shares of the National City Bank stock through the National City Co., its investment affiliate.

The suit charged Rend suffered losses approximating $1,500,000, including interest on the investment, and asserted the stock was sold him through misrepresentations.

Accused Forger To Be Sent Here

According to an Associated Press dispatch, the prisoner has been ordered returned to the District by United States Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney. The forged check was passed in the Riggs National Bank here November 4, 1930.

The Associated Press stated Peyton B. Fletcher, a teller at the Riggs Bank, had identified the woman as the check passer. She will be returned for arraignment.

were withheld by their holders. Treasury gossip points to another conversion offer before April 15 when these called bonds will be presented for cash.

$900,000,000 Conversion Total.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., announced yesterday that $889,899,200 of Fourth Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds had been presented for conversion into 10-12-year bonds which, after the first year, will pay 3¼ per cent interest. For the first year the rate will be 4¼ per cent.

Mr. Morgenthau said that Federal Reserve banks held a few more of the called bonds that would be presented, bringing the total to slightly more than $900,000,000. Of this total about $25,000,000 bore serial numbers that were not called. The bonds called, as of April 15, subject to conversion at once, totaled $1,875,000,000. Of the bonds presented under the conversion offer, more than two-thirds came in the few days between the refunding announcement and that of the gold purchase policy.

The financing operation announced yesterday did not take into account the outstanding called Liberty loan bonds. Its purpose was to retire $254,364,000 of three-fourths of 1 per cent certificates and $473,328,000 of 4¼ per cent certificates, both issues maturing December 15, and to pay $114,000,000 in interest on the public debt due on that date.

After these obligations are met there will remain out of the $950,000,000 sought about $108,000,000 for the general fund of the Treasury, which on December 1, the last day for which figures are available, had a balance of $1,078,043,224. Aside from the December 15 maturities, however, the Treasury will have to refund four issues of bills aggregating $350,167,000 between now and January 10.

Spends $400,000,000 Monthly.

Disregarding the dual system of bookkeeping under which emergency expenses have been put in an extraordinary budget, the Treasury on December 1 had a deficit of $802,504,182 for the fiscal year that started July 1. This compares with a deficit of $1,158,047,079 in the corresponding period of last year. Since July of this year the Federal Government has actually spent a total of $1,946,913,000, roughly at the rate of $400,000,000 a month.

Figures of the Federal public debt present an even clearer picture of the mounting cost of the Government. At the beginning of March—which was the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration—the outstanding debt totaled $20,934,729,209. The debt at the end of November totaled $23,534,115,771, or an increase of $2,599,386,562 in nine months.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech

President Tells Federal Council of Churches That State and Religion Engaged in Same Fight for Humanity As Was Waged in Early Christian Era.

The following is the text of President Roosevelt's address made last night before the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America:

I am honored by the privilege of speaking to the delegated representatives of 25 Christian denominations assembled here on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. In this quarter of a century you have surrendered no individual creed, but at the same time you have been creating a much-needed union that seeks to better the social and moral conditions of all the people of America.

During a quarter of a century more greatly controlled by the spirit of conquest and greed than any similar period since the American and the French revolutions you have survived and grown. You have come through to the threshhold of a new era in which your churches and the other churches—Gentile and Jew—recognize and stand ready to lead in a new war of peace—the war for social justice.

Advance of Civilization.

Christianity was born in and of an era notable for the great gulf that separated the privileged from the under-privileged of the world of 2,000 years ago—an era of lines of demarcation between conquerors and conquered; between caste and caste; between warring philosophers based on the theories of logicians rather than on the practical humanities. The early churches were united in a social ideal.

Although through all the centuries we know of many periods when civilization has slipped a step backward, yet I am confident that over the sum of the centuries we have gained many steps for every one we have lost.

Now, once more, we are embarking on another voyage into the realm of human contacts. That human agency which we call government is seeking through social and economic means the same goal which the churches are seeking through social and spiritual means.

If I were asked to state the great objective which church and state are both demanding for the sake of every man and woman and child in this country, I would say that that great objective is "a more abundant life."

Challenging Pagan Ethics.

The early Christians challenged the pagan ethics of Greece and of Rome; we are wholly ready to challenge the pagan ethics that are represented in many phases of our boasted modern civilization. We have called on enlightened business judgment, on understanding labor and on intelligent agriculture to provide a more equitable balance of the abundant life between all elements of the community.

We recognize the right of the individual to seek and to obtain his own fair wage, his own fair profit, in his own fair way—just so long as in the doing of it he shall not push down nor hold down his own neighbor. And at the same time, we are at one in calling for collective effort on broad lines of social planning—a collective effort which is wholly in accord with the social teachings of Christianity.

This new generation of ours stands ready to help us. They may not be as ready as were their fathers and mothers to accept the outward requirements or even many of the ancient observances of the several churches, yet I truly believe that these same churches can find in them a stronger support for the fundamentals of social betterment than many of the older generation are willing to concede.

This younger generation is not satisfied with the exposure of those in high places who seek to line their own nests with other people's money, to cheat their Government of its just dues or to break the spirit of the law while observing its legalistic letter. This new generation seeks action—action by collective government and by individual education, toward the ending of practices such as these.

Assails Lynch Law.

This new generation, for example, is not content with preachings against that vile form of collective murder—lynch law—which has broken out in our midst anew. We know that it is murder, and a deliberate and definite disobedience of the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill." We do not excuse those in high places or low who condone lynch law.

But a thinking America goes further. It seeks a government of its own that will be sufficiently strong to protect the prisoner and at the same time to crystallize a public opinion so clear that government of all kinds will be compelled to practice a more certain justice. The judicial function of government is the protection of the individual and of the community through quick and certain justice. That function in many places has fallen into a state of disrepair. It must be a part of our program to reestablish it.

From the bottom of my heart I believe that this beloved country of ours is entering upon a time of great gain. That gain can well include a greater material prosperity if we take care that it is a prosperity for 120,000,000 human beings and not a prosperity for the top of the pyramid alone. It can be a prosperity socially controlled for the common good. It can be a prosperity built on spiritual and social values rather than on special privilege and special power.

Toward that new definition of prosperity the churches and the governments, while wholly separate in their functioning, can work hand in hand. Government can ask the churches to stress in their teaching the ideals of social justice, while at the same time Government guarantees to the churches—Gentile and Jew—the right to worship God in their own way. The churches, while they remain wholly free from even the suggestion of interference in government, can at the same time teach their millions of followers that they have the right to demand of the Government of their own choosing, the maintenance and furtherance of "a more abundant life."

Yes, the churches are the greatest influence in the world today to overcome greed and for spreading this new philosophy of Government. State and church are rightly united in a common aim. With the help of God, we are on the road toward it.

Antilynching Bill To Be Introduced

Celler and Costigan Plan Joint Congress Measure.

A Federal antilynching bill will be introduced concurrently in the House and Senate at the January session, Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), New York, announced last night.

Celler said he will cooperate with Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, who will introduce the bill in the Senate.

It was the second proposal to bring about Federal legislation against mob violence in the last ten years. A similar bill by former Representative L. C. Dyer, of Missouri, passed the House in 1922, but was killed by a filibuster in the Senate.

J. P. Hill Is Sued By Girls' School

Action Asks $2,228 for 3 Daughters' Tuition.

The Holton Arms School, fashionable institution for girls, yesterday in District Supreme Court filed suit against John Philip Hill, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of Maryland, for $2,228 alleged tuition due for his three daughters.

Hill's three daughters, Kitty, Elsie and Suzanne attended the school, it was alleged. The suit charges $2,062 of the amount sought represents unpaid tuition, and that the remainder represents the balance of an over-due note.

Attorney T. L. Bartlett filed the suit.

An illustrated lecture on prehistoric cliff dwellers of America will be given today at 8 p. m. at the auditorium of the Interior Department by Paul R. Franke, of Mesa Verde National Park.

This Train Caller's 'Umphff!' For Ashtabula Has Got to Stop

The Federal Government intends to take up the case of the train caller who says "Umphff," when he means Ashtabula.

If he doesn't improve his pronunciation the Federal coordinator of transportation indicates he will be "umphffed" out of his job. The unintelligible train announcer is only one of the worries of Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman, whose job is to rehabilitate the Nation's $26,000,000,000 railroad system.

Mr. Eastman's major job is to get more people to ride trains. Therefore he is considering such major railroading reforms as:

Windows for upper berths, time tables which ordinary citizens can read, hot-water faucets which pour out hot water in passenger-car washrooms, abolition of tips for George, the porter; prettier decorations for interiors of cars, recreation cars for bridge, movies and dancing, bigger car windows, rubber-cushioned wheels, home delivery of railroad tickets and telephone service from trains when they are in motion.

Mrs. W. S. S. Erb, 86, Will Be Buried Here

Funeral services were held yesterday at West Palm Beach, Fla., for Mrs. Norrie A. Erb, 86, widow of Capt. William S. Smith Erb, Civil War veteran. She died Monday. The body will be brought here for burial in Arlington beside her husband who died in 1926.

Mrs. Erb was born in Stark County, Ohio, in 1847. Surviving is a daughter, Miss Daisy E. Erb.

President Hits Lynching Wave In Church Talk

Declares Country Is Near New Era of Great Prosperity.

It must be a part of our program to reestablish it."

Summing up an address that reflected much of the New Deal philosophy, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"From the bottom of my heart I believe that this beloved country of ours is entering upon a time of great gain.

"That gain," he went on, "can well include a greater material prosperity if we take care that it is a prosperity for 120,000,000 human beings and not a prosperity for the top of the pyramid alone. It can be a prosperity socially controlled for the common good. It can be a prosperity built on spiritual and social values rather than on special privilege and special power."

To "this new definition of prosperity" he called the churches and governments—while separate in function—to work hand in hand. Churches, he told his audience, "can teach their millions of followers that they have the right to demand of the government of their own choosing, the maintainance and furtherance of 'a more abundant life.'"

Assails "Greed, Conquest."

Declaring "the spirit of conquest and greed" dominated the last quarter century more than any other period since the American Revolution, the President proclaimed a new era in which "Government is seeking through social and economic means the same goal which the churches are seeking through social and spiritual means.

"The early Christains challenged the pagan ethics of Greece and of Rome," he continued. "We are wholly ready to challenge the pagan ethics that are represented in many phases of our boasted modern civilization. * * *

"We recognize the right of the individual to seek and to obtain his own fair wage, his own fair profit, in his own fair way—just so long as in the doing of it he shall not push down nor hold down his neighbor. And at the same time, we are at one in calling for collective effort on broad lines of social planning—a collective effort which is wholly in accord with the social teachings of Christainity."

Talks of New Generation.

Turning to "this new generation of ours," President Roosevelt declared "they may not be as ready as were their fathers and mothers to accept the outward requirements or even many of the ancient observances of the several churches," but that he believed them stalwart supports for the "fundamentals of social betterment."

"This younger generation," he went on, "is not satisfied with the exposure of those in high places who seek to line their own nests with other people's money, to cheat the government of its just dues or to break the spirit of the law while observing its legalistic letter.

"This new generation seeks action—action by collective government and by individual education, toward the ending of practices such as these."

In this oblique manner the President is thought to have reference to recent disclosures brought about by governmental investigations. By a similar indirect method he disposed of critics of the Administration as "intolerant tories" in his recent Georgia speeches.

Rolph Silent on Talk.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Gov. James Rolph tonight withheld comment on the speech of President Roosevelt condemning lawlessness "until I have time to think it over."

"I have the profoundest respect for the President and all that he says," Gov. Rolph told the United Press. "I do not feel, however, that I have had sufficient opportunity to digest his remarks to qualify me to comment upon them. After I have read the speech in full I may have something to say."

Federal Church Council Head Asks 22,000,000 to Aid NRA

Challenges Theory That Congregations Should Avoid Public Issues.

A call upon the 22,000,000 people represented by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, for their "whole-souled and unselfish support" of the recovery program was made last night in an address before delegates to the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the organization by its president, Dr. Albert W. Beaven, head of Colgate Rochester Theological Seminary.

Dr. Beaven spoke before delegates from 25 communions assembled in Constitution Hall, who later listened to an address by President Roosevelt.

Dr. Beaven challenged theories that "the church should confine itself to religion, and not interfere in questions of industry, war and peace, or in control of such traffics as liquor, arms, motion pictures and other powerful factors in modern life."

Delegates meeting earlier in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church heard outlined a proposal for a church crusade for international peace by Dr. Walter Van Kirk, of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Council.

New Germany Described.

The proposal was submitted in "view of the gravity of the present world situation."

A review of conditions in Germany was given the assembly by Bishop John L. Nuelson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Zurich, Switzerland.

The new Germany was described as "a revolt of youth" and Adolf Hitler was given credit for turning the "current that was sweeping Germany into the chaos of Godless communism."

Declaring that he was neither praising nor denouncing conditions in Germany, Bishop Nuelson said "whatever his mistakes, and some of them are serious, * * * Hitler has put a new spirit into millions of hopeless, aimless, almost despondent young men and women."

The national surge in Germany toward a Germanic state religion was described as a move for a "Nordic, pagan religion, the outgrowth of the Nordic soul," in Dr. Nuelson's address.

Will Hear Wallace, Green.

Questioned from the floor by an unidentified delegate, Bishop Nuelson was asked for an estimtae of the number of Jews killed in Germany during disturbances of the past few years.

The delegate said he had heard the figure "30" mentioned. Bishop Nuelson said he had heard the figure put as high as 300, but that he judged the number would be somewhere between the two figures.

At today's concluding sessions the delegates will discuss liquor problems and hear addresses by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and William Green.

Howard Bruce, Bank Leader, Hurt in Crash

Baltimore Political Figure Cut, Bruised; Four Others Victims.

Howard Bruce, member of the Democratic National Committee and one of Baltimore's most prominent bankers, was injured last night when his limousine crashed into a towing car at Muirkirk, Md. Two other Baltimore bankers, a clerk and the driver of the other car also were injured.

Bruce suffered a laceration above one eye, facial cuts and body bruises. He remained at the St. Agnes Hospital, in Baltimore, overnight.

Others injured:

Howard E. Boyce, president of the Maryland Trust Co., Baltimore, fractured right arm and facial cuts.

Henry B. Thomas, jr., vice president of the Baltimore National Bank, serious facial cuts and a dislocated hip.

Elmer Webster, clerk in the Bartlett Hayward Co., munitions makers, Baltimore, fractured knee cap and cuts and bruises.

Lewis J. Miller, of Laurel, Md., driver of the towing car, cuts and bruises.

A statement signed by six physicians at St. Agnes Hospital said "all four are seriously hurt," but added they probably will recover.

Followed Four-Car Crash.

The accident followed a four-car smash-up near the Muirkirk underpass and accurred when a Laurel garage towing car, driven by Miller, tried to dodge another auto and swerved into the Bruce limousine, driven by Webster.

Bruce and his party, headed for Washington, were taken to Baltimore by passing cars, while Miller was treated by Dr. N. B. Steward, of Laurel.

The accident was witnessed by Wade L. Smith and C. L. Parker, of the Laurel substation, Maryland police.

Those involved in the four-car crash, caused by slippery streets after one tried to make a left turn, were Raymond J. Huston, of Muirkirk; James A. Hauser, of Annapolis Junction; William R. McClayton, and Bernard Leisler, of Baltimore. All suffered cuts and bruises.

Miller was trying to dodge a car driven by Samuel J. Lea, of Everett, Mass., when he swerved into the Bruce car.

Bruce High in Politics.

Bruce, early this year, was mentioned as a candidate for the post of Secretary of the Treasury under President Roosevelt.

A member of one of Maryland's most distinguished families, Bruce is the nephew of former Senator William Cabell Bruce, the father-in-law of Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, daughter of Andrew Mellon.

Bruce is chairman of the board of the reorganized Baltimore National Bank and heads the board of the Bartlett Hayward Co., one of the largest munition plants during the World War. He is the owner of Billy Barton, winner of the Grand National Sweepstakes in England in 1928.

Corn-Hog Pact Gets Approval

Wallace Asks Farmers to Participate in Adjustment Plan.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Wallace yesterday approved the contract to be offered to farmers for participation in the $350,000,000 corn-hog production adjustment plan and appointed committees in six Middle Western States to work for success of the plan.

Mr. Wallace urged chairmen of committees in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Missouri, South Dakota and Indiana to convert their committees immediately to map the campaign organization work. Committees are being organized in Illinois, Kansas and Ohio.

In behalf of the plan, Secretary Wallace said: "The surplus of corn and hogs has been piling up for a good many years, only in part from our loss of the export market, and considerably from the decline in corn fed to horses and mules."

Cat Show Open To Alley Feline

Tabbies Get Better Break in Fanciers' Exhibit Dec. 15 and 16.

The short-haired or "alley" cat is to be given a vastly bigger break in the animal show this year of the Columbian Cat Fanciers Association, Inc.

Usually devoted almost exclusively to the interests of the "aristocrat" or pedigreed members of the feline family, the local association this year will devote several classes and prizes to the cat whose family tree is questionable.

More than 200 cats of all types are expected to be entered in this year's show, to be held December 15 and 16 at the Lee House. Approximately 100 special and cash prizes, besides numerous ribbons, will be awarded.

For the first time in this city a catnip tree, a device perfected to attract cats from scratching furniture and upholstery, will be shown at the Columbian show. A part of the proceeds from the show are to be donated to the Washington Post Christmas Toy Fund for luckless youngsters, and probably a baby Persian kitten for some sick and lonesome child.

District Dry Law Is Assailed

2 Court Motions Claim Its Invalidation by Repeal.

Two motions contending that repeal of the eighteenth amendment invalidates the District prohibition law were filed in the U. S. branch of the Police Court yesterday.

One motion seeks to quash and the other seeks to dismiss a Police Court information charging Roland R. Steiner with violation of the Prohibition Act.

The motions, made by Attorneys George J. Boden and Louis L. Whitestone, contend that Steiner is not guilty of the violation of any liquor law in the District since the enactment of the twenty-first amendment.

The motion charges the information is not filed "by virtue or under authority of any law, statute or regulation now existing or applicable to the District of Columbia."

Arguments on the motion will be heard later in the week. Steiner, who was arrested about two months ago, pleaded not guilty when arraigned. He is 19 years old and lives at 1236 Owens place northeast.

U. S. Power Company Plans Battle in Cuba

Havana, Dec. 6 (AP).—Wedged between a presidential decree ordering a 34 per cent rate reduction throughout the island and 41 demands from its employes, the American-owned Cuban Electric Co. tonight prepared to fight to the last ditch to "protect its rights."

The power company controversy was only one of a series of economic troubles confronting the government and labor unrest throughout the island did not lessen the worries of President Ramon Grau San Martin.

with which he has faced the Senate inquisitors when, almost with vehemence, he said:

"This unlimited liability will breed distrust in the strong banks, create fears among the nolders of bank shares, prevent the flow of new capital into banking, and contribute to general financial distrust. I can not emphasize this too strongly."

Turning to the securities act, Aldrich declared that it was responsible for the "emotional paralysis and stagnation" which has affected the securities market since its passage last July.

Asked by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, for specific recommendations for modification of the act, Aldrich said he objected particularly to the personal liability of directors of issuing corporations for all the facts and claims filed with the Federal Trade Commission. He said it was "too great a risk."

Hits at Wiggin Again.

Taking the opportunity for further repudiation of the practices of his predecessor, Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National Bank, Aldrich firmly stated that he believed bank officials should receive no direct nor indirect compensation from any outside source.

Charles S. McCain, chairman of the board of Chase National Bank, was sworn in late in the session, but questioning of him was postponed until this morning.

Hull Questions Foreign Bids At Conference

Asks Probe of Portuguese, Spanish Interest in Montevideo.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 6 (AP). A movement to investigate requests of the League of Nations, Spain and Portugal for official observers at the Pan-American Conference was opened today by Cordell Hull, head of the United States delegation.

The American Secretary of State moved in the Steering Committee to create a committee on policy to "re-examine purposes" of the bids for observers. A vote on his motion is scheduled tomorrow.

Although the committee had previously approved admission of Spanish and Portuguese observers, a full session of the conference has not yet ratified the action. A policy committee, if created, might be empowered to reconsider the requests.

Disintegration Feared.

The United States, it was learned, feels admission of non-American observers should be considered in relation to structural integrity and original objectives and might prove an entering wedge of disintegration into Pan-Americanism.

Argentina's espousal of a Spanish observer was followed by Brazil's surprise request for the same privilege for Portugal.

Mexico months ago suggested that Canada be permited an observer, but the Dominion apparently was uninterested. Some delegates wondered if Haiti would propose a French observer.

The conference has given no thought to what status would attach to recognized observers, but some assumed they would be eligible to enter executive sessions. This was held in some quarters as a possible lead toward introduction of European influences into Pan-American counsels.

Chaco War on Agenda.

Earlier, over the objection of Peru and Argentina, who said in view of the Chaco hostilities it would be like a "firebrand igniting," the Committee on Organization for Peace decided to name a subcommittee to study conciliation and prevention of war and also placed the Chaco conflict on the agenda.

Some quarters had hoped to block treaty discussions until economic programs had been threshed out.

Explaining that he wanted the conference to act in some way on the Chaco struggle between Bolivia and Paraguay, Dr. Miguel Cruchaga, of Chile, chairman of the peace committee, named a subcommittee which was instructed to study the advisability of sending the belligerents a "friendly" message. This, Dr. Cruchaga said, would enable them to indicate if they wished the war ceased.

Treaty Talk Dropped.

Although a subcommittee was named to study the Saavedralamas antiwar treaty, signed in October by six nations, the treaty was later withdrawn from discussion. Its proponent, Dr. Carlos Saavedralamas, foreign minister of Argentina, said the treaty was accomplished and needed no debate.

Its signatories are Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Uruguay and Paraguay.

Subcommittees were named by the transportation committee on river navigation, inter-American railways and aviation.

The United States belongs to the groups, enabling its delegates to present proposals carrying out the preconference statement of President Roosevelt urging the conference to seek improvement of transportation in all lines to bring the countries into closer touch and improve trade.

C. F. Bigelow, Rail Chief, Shot

Bullet Fired in Home Narrowly Misses Heart; Condition Serious.

Shot over the heart in his apartment at 4007 Connecticut avenue northwest yesterday, Charles F. Bigelow, 49, division passenger agent of the Southern Railway, was in a serious condition in Emergency Hospital last night. Physicians said the .38 caliber revolver bullet entered the left side of his chest, just above the cardiac muscles.

Bigelow's right hand grasped a revolver when he was found by Mrs. William H. Martin, a neighbor, attracted by the screams of the wounded man's wife, Mrs. Blanche Bigelow, who rushed into the apartment hallway when she heard the shot.

Mrs. Bigelow was cooking breakfast at the time of the shooting. She joined his business associates in asserting her husband had been in excellent health and spirits. He recently had returned from a Southern business trip, she said.

Extremely popular with fellow-workers, Bigelow was in charge of passenger traffic and ticket service.

Doctors said his chances for recovery were excellent.

Court Holds Joyce's Novel Is Not Obscene

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—A copy of James Joyce's novel, "Ulysses," was ordered admitted to the United States today by Federal Judge John M. Woolsey, who held the book was not obscene.

His ruling closed long litigation over the volume, which had been seized by customs officials. "I am quite aware that owing to some of its scenes," said the judge in his opinion, "'Ulysses' is a rather strong draft to ask some sensitive, though normal, persons to take."

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

IMMEDIATE restoration of one-third of the 15 per cent pay cut is proposed by President Roosevelt, it was learned at the subcommittee hearing yesterday on the independent offices appropriation bill.

BAKER

Representative Woodrum, chairman, however, goes further by declaring that the entire 15 per cent should be restored as soon as possible "and certainly not wait until July 1, when the new fiscal year begins."

Another bright spot on the salary horizon is the prediction of Gen. Pershing that "the reduction in compensation to Federal employes will be eliminated during the fiscal year 1935."

With restoration of part of the pay assured, employe leaders, members of Congress and various civic groups are bending every effort to win back the full amount in the first weeks of the session of Congress.

Virginia Civil Works Provide Jobs for 5,292

147 Projects Under Way; Places for 49,000 Sought by Dec. 15.

Richmond, Dec. 6 (AP).—A total of 5,292 persons have been put to work in Virginia by the Civil Works Administration, it was announced at State headquarters here today as innumerable applications for other projects were placed on file.

A total of 147 projects are actually under way in the State and hundreds of others will be started immediately, since the administration is seeking to find work for 49,000 by December 15.

Projects in 22 Counties.

The projects now under way are in 22 counties and eight cities. The cities are Richmond, Petersburg, Charlottesville, Harrisonburg, Staunton, Bedford, Lynchburg and Roanoke.

Meanwhile applications for loans and grants from the Federal Public Works Administration are still coming in, and according to Col. James A. Anderson, engineer for the State Advisory Board, localities that need funds for public works should not hesitate to apply.

Explains Ickes Statement.

He explained that Secretary Ickes' statement to the effect that Virginia already had been allotted 192 per cent of the tentative amount fixed as its share of the $3,300,000,000 program was not intended as a barrier to further applications. The 192 per cent included many projects strictly Federal, which are not passed upon by the State board.

The Federal office allotted Virginia approximately $35,000,000 for public works for cities and localities, and has approved projects of that sort involving only about $8,000,000, it was said.

Sanitary District No. 1, in Henrico County, today applied for a loan and grant aggregating $100,000 for a water and sewage system.

France to Quit Gold Standard, Predicts Lewis

England Will Adopt U. S. Money Plan, He Says After Woodin Talk.

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 6 (AP).—Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, predicted here today that France will go off the gold standard within two weeks and return to her bimetal system of two years ago, and England will adopt the controlled monetary policy of the United States.

He hinted a new adjustment of the whole war debt question would result.

The Democratic Senate whip also said in an interview it is likely "the United States will unite with its controlled gold standard the proportion of silver as will meet the demands of the small trade."

Talked With Woodin.

Senator Lewis accompanied Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin on a train trip from St. Louis to El Paso.

The Illinois Senator declined to divulge whether his sudden change of itinerary, which puzzled his Chicago secretary and kept reception committees along his previously announced route waiting, was made for the purpose of conferring with Woodin on monetary questions.

"We talked about a lot of things," said Senator Lewis, "especially about my throat. I stick to my story that I did not disappear, but came to El Paso from Springfield, Ill., joining Woodin in St. Louis. I wanted to get treatment for my throat in El Paso."

Foresees U. S. Stand.

Senator Lewis said, "for the first time in 50 years of international conferences, America is a creditor country."

"Before, she was always a debtor," he said. "Now for the first time America does not have to make any concessions to serve interests opposed to her own.

"Consequently, if there is stabilization or evening up of the money basis the foreign nations must make the surrenders.

"America is pleased to adopt arrangements of general equality, but can not now lessen United States trade by giving advantage to foreign competitiors as a mere accommodation."

Ford Serves Beer to Guests At Showing of His 1934 Cars

Abandons Old Custom of Letting Competitors Exhibit First.

Detroit, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Henry Ford displayed his new 1934 cars at a private showing today and amazed his guests by serving 3.2 beer at a luncheon.

Introduction of the new models at this time marked an innovation, as Ford customarily has waited until competitors have announced their new designs and prices.

At the same time it was made known that Ford plans to launch a vigorous campaign for new business and his early presentation of the 1934 car was his first indication of this effort. Officials said that the motor magnate looks to next year for a steady business improvement in all lines.

The new Ford models resemble the present car in exterior appearance, but engineers and officials of the company claim the improvements are "on the inside."

Passenger car prices will be increased from $5 to $35 on the various models, while commercial cars will be reduced from $20 to $30.

Officials claimed that the new car has greater power, more speed, quicker acceleration, smoother performance and will give more miles to the gallon. The bodies have added streamlining.

Other features include a dual down-draft carburetor and dual intake manifold on the engine. Transverse spring principle designed to prevent tilting on uneven roads; double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers and new instrument panels, arm rests and doorpulls.

Northeast and Southeast Areas Work Mapped at Peabody School.

Representatives of about 25 organizations, including churches, parent-teacher associations and the police department, made plans at a meeting at Peabody School Tuesday night to care for needy families in Northeast and Southeast Washington.

Charity plans and the organization for handling Christmas needs were explained by Mrs. E. H. Griffith, chairman of the Christmas toy committee; Miss Mary Edith Coulson for the Christmas Exchange, and Miss Helen P. Story of the Associated Charities. The Rev. Clifford H. Jope of the Ninth Street Christian Church spoke on "What Christmas Means." The Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy of St. Joseph's Church gave the invocation.

The committee in charge of the meeting included Mrs. C. B. Green, chairman; Mrs. Harry N. Stull, Mrs. H. R. Hix, Mrs. G. Leimbach and Mrs. Arthur J. McMillan.

Ripley Allotted $37,000.

20 States Hunt Good Liquor At Fair Price

Incidents at Minimum; Officials Try to Untie Distribution Tangles.

(Associated Press.)

Quietly but somewhat awkwardly, Americans went about revamping their drinking habits yesterday while Federal officials sought to straighten out distribution tangles to make legal liquor available at reasonable prices.

The first full day of repeal brought few incidents, compared with the riotous last hours before prohibition.

Citizens went about their business in the score of wet states somewhat curious about where and when a drink might be purchased at reasonable prices.

Confusion Widespread.

Repeal had widely differing effects in many parts of the country and abroad. Enthusiasm was noticeably lacking. Generally there was a shortage of supplies with resultant high prices.

From London, Paris and Berlin came reports of enthusiasm over prospective exportation of spirits, beer and wine.

Arrests for drunkenness reported from wet centers were said to average about the same as in prohibition days. Speakeasies in many places shut down, while hotels and restaurant cash registers rang up liquor sales.

Confusion existed in some States over the new liquor laws. Some States that ratified the twenty-first amendment still were dry, particularly Utah, the thirty-sixth State, which failed to repeal its own prohibition.

Maine yesterday became the thirty-seventh State to ratify, but this first State in the Union to go dry remains arid under its own constitution.

Border Oases Deserted.

New York, Chicago, and New Orleans saw the principal celebrations. Some West Coast cities chimed in also.

New Jersey got its liquor control law on the books early yesterday after the Legislature had overridden Gov. A. Harry Moore's veto.

At Peoria, Ill., and other big distilling points, smoke from scores of stacks indicated whisky plants were again running full blast. Many men were reported to have been given employment.

Mexican and Canadian border points that thrived on thirsty Americans during prohibition were virtually deserted. Only half a dozen vessels were reported in the rum fleet off the North Atlantic Coast.

Son's Pose Bared In Woman's Death

Monte Carlo Death Result of Sleeping Potion.

Monte Carlo, Dec. 6 (AP).—Frederick Elkington, an Englishman, came from Nice tonight and identified the body of his wife, whose death created a two-day mystery here.

After jazz music, loudly played on a phonograph, had led to discovery of the body in a hotel room, the dead woman's 17-year-old son at first posed as her brother, gave the name of "Wilson" and asserted they were both Americans.

His excuse for not reporting the death, police said, was that he thought his "sister" asleep. A doctor said the woman was poisoned by an overdose of sleeping potion.

James Roosevelt and Wife at White House

President's Son Here From Boston for Visit; First Lady Leaves for New York Tonight, Returns Tomorrow.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt were joined last evening at the White House by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, who came from their home in Boston.

Last evening the President was accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt when he went to deliver his address at 10 o'clock before the Federal Council of Churches in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Later the First Lady took the midnight train for New York and will return to the Capital today in time to attend the diplomatic reception.

At tea time yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt received members of the Federal Council of Churches, and before accompanying the President to hear his speech, she went to the dinner of the board of directors of the National League of Women Voters, to join the guests for coffee.

The procedure of the diplomatic reception this evening will vary somewhat from that of former years in view of the desire of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to serve refreshments to their guests.

The President and First Lady will proceed to the small dining room where the members of the Cabinet will have assembled, and where they will be welcomed informally. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will then proceed to the state dining room, and pass through the red room into the blue room where they will take up their position to receive their guests.

The blue room will be divided across the middle by a screen of plants and flowers, and the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will stand facing the windows, instead of with their backs to the windows as has been the custom for several years.

The members of the Cabinet will follow the President and Mrs. Roosevelt as far as the red room.

The Speaker of the House, members of the Foreign Relations and Foreign Affairs Committees, former Ambassadors, Assistant Secretaries of State and a limited number of other officials with their wives will be shown into the green room upon their arrival. Formerly these guests waited to be reeceived in the red room and passed through the blue room into the green room. This year the order is reversed. They will be received by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt immediately after the members of the Diplomatic Corps.

The members of the Diplomatic Corps will be admitted to the White House at the south entrance, and after proceeding up the stairs will turn to the left and enter the east room by the main entrance. The southern portion of the east room will be roped off in order that the diplomats may have an opportunity to assemble there in their proper order of precedence. They will proceed through the southern door of the east room, across the end of the green room and into the blue room, where they will be received by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. They will then pass across the end of the red room and into the dining room, where the refreshments will be served.

The other guests will enter via the east entrance and will proceed up the main staircase and will go directly into the east room. These guests will be received after the diplomats and other officials.

After the guests have been received the President will retire to his private apartments. There will be dancing in the east room, at which Mrs. Roosevelt expects to be present.

No End of Books

Volume of Letters, 72d of Tolstoi's Works, Just Published in Moscow; Moyra Charlton, 15, Writes Her Fourth Book, "Three White Stockings."

The 72d volume of Tolstoi's works has just been published in Moscow. It is a collection of 366 letters, covering but two years in his life, 1900-1901. They are interesting years, however, for during them Tolstoi completed his great novel "Resurrection," and it was issued in Russia and abroad. Many of the letters contain his bickerings with publishers anxious to print the work. Other letters deal with the Russian immigration to Canada, and the relief of the starving peasants in the Volga Valley at that time. Most amusing are letters which Tolstoi wrote in reply to the "nuts." One answers a stranger who had begged for money to redeem some baggage held in a railroad station. Another is in reply to a fashionable London shoe shop which had asked Tolstoi's comment on its new, so-called "Vegetarian Type" of shoe. The Russian master waxed a bit caustic about this trifling with one of his pet beliefs.

Miss Moyra Charlton is only 15, but already she has written three books with a total sale of 25,000 copies, and Putnam has just printed her fourth, a true narrative of a horse called Chum, entitled "Three White Stockings." Miss Charlton is the only daughter of Brig. Gen. C. E. Charlton. She started writing short stories when she was seven, and when she was 11 her first book, "Tallyho," was published.

"Such Is My Beloved" is the title of Morley Callaghan's next novel, which Scribner will publish in the spring.

The Shark-Killer.

A narrative, "SHARK! SHARK!" by Capt. William E. Young, as told to Horace S. Mazet. F. R. G. S. (Gotham House, New York, $4.50.)

The slim, straight form of a 16-year-old boy flashed down from the diving tower and split the blue-green water off Fort DeRussey, near Waikiki Beach. In a moment his head reappeared, glistening under the Hawaiian sun. A dozen other youngsters from Punahou School shouted and splashed about. Schools of rainbow-colored fish flickered over the bright coral bottom. A quarter-mile out the surf broke over the coral reef, white upon turquoise.

Beyond the reef there were sharks. We all knew that. But none of us was afraid, none of us ever saw a shark inside that protected lagoon.

Although I lived in Honolulu for three years, I never laid eyes on a shark. But not long back a friend from the Islands visited me here in the East. Recalling those carefree days, he told me that one night he had baited a large hook with pork and left it hanging in the water off that DeRussey diving tower. Next day a ten-foot shark was dead on the end of the rope. I was six years and 5,000 miles away, but I shuddered.

Every one in the islands knew Capt. Young, "kane mano," the shark-killer. He had moved on in his travels long before, but the contracting firm he started was still going strong, two of his nephews were at school at Punahou, and legends about him were vivid in every one's mind.

For he had one interest, one love and hate—sharks. He had come out to the islands in 1900 with his brother Herb, and had begun as the owner of a launch to run the customs officials around the harbor. Off afternoons, he hunted sharks. He shot them and speared them and caught them on hooks. He had a positive mania for it. And little by little, as he learned about them and their ways, he became a specialist in these "dragons of sea-going legend, possessed of infinite strength and savagery," and he traveled all over the earth, to North Carolina, Florida, Nantucket, Samoa, New Zealand, the West Indies, and French Somaliland to kill them, skin them, and pioneer in the infant industry of shark leather.

"Shark! Shark!" is his whole story, an utterly fascinating account of his years of adventure. Its pages are filled with stories about sharks which will raise the hair on your head, with anecdotes over which you will burst out laughing, with all the lively incidents in the career of a born wanderer.

One never loses sight of sharks, and the strange facts about them. Capt. Young is a scientist as well as a professional hunter. Did you know that a shark's liver is one-quarter of its weight, that no shark over 8 feet long has ever been kept in captivity for the odd reason that they swim round and round the tank until they die of exhaustion, that nobody knows how long it takes a shark to grow to maturity, that the digestive fluid of a shark is so strong that it will take the skin off your hand and will eat into tin, that a shark does not have to turn on its side to bite, and that the largest shark of all is perfectly harmless to man because it has no teeth? There are a thousand other items. Few of us may know very much about sharks, but for some reason all of us want to learn about them. Capt. Young has found that he has only to take out a photograph or two in any company and start talking shark, and every one will listen with bated breath. By the same token, his book should be as widely interesting.

It is excellently got up (the back is of shark leather) and there are a number of exciting, and some gruesome, photographs. Capt. Young has done well with this first popular book about sharks. But I can not help wondering what will happen to him, after so shark-icidal a career, if he should ever in some far-off hereafter of fishes and men meet the Great Shark God.

THEODORE HALL.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

An investigation of the common cold and also of the relation of that disease to influenza has been carried on for several years with funds supplied for the purpose. The results of the investigation tend toward the following conclusions:

Influenza is the common cold that we have with us always, plus a something else. Clinically that something else is pneumonia, but of a kind that differs from the ordinary pneumonias that every late winter-spring season piles on top of the colds picture. It is not possible now to say what is the microscopic something—bacteria or virus—which is added to the coryza and, by the addition, brings about an influenza wave.

Dr. J. A. Doull and associates consider the wave of 1928-'29 to have been influenza just as much so as the severe wave of 1918. Other waves studied by them in the Baltimore area they regard as waves of common colds.

Most people are susceptible to coryza, though some escape entirely. A person who has but three colds a year is regarded as about normal. Those who are subject to four or five a year are regarded as supersusceptible. There are students of the subject who propose that all persons who have more than five attacks a year are spreaders of the infection and should be studied.

There is considerable variation in colds, according to these observers, and with this every one will agree. Furthermore, there is seasonal variation in the type of colds. In October and May people with colds are not so apt to develop sore throat and cough. On the other hand, other observers have said that November is the month for sore throats, and coughs can be expected in colds that develop in the first three months of the year.

Averaging the year, Dr. Doull and associates found that hoarseness complicates one-half the cases of common cold. And one-third of them have enough laryngitis and bronchitis to cause coughing and expectoration. Something less than one-half the cases have some degree of fever. A temperature of 102 in an uncomplicated cold s regarded as unusually high. There are fever blisters in a small proportion of the cases. Redness of the eyes is an occasional complication. About 10 per cent of the cases have complications, the most frequent of which is extension to a sinus. About the only pathology that can be found when the nose is examined is some swelling of the turbinates.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius"

If December 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 to 9 a. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:15 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:35 p. m.

Influences operating on this date are such that you will probably feel "under the weather." Little of an unusual or exciting nature will occur and the day will more than likely pass without much being accomplished. Social functions will be lifeless and few people will be able to get up much enthusiasm over anything. Many who attend the theater will be much more interested in their own problems and this will prove most disconcerting to the actors.

If December 7 is the date of your birth, you will more than likely expect people to conform to your ideas and wishes in all matters. You will always have a strong conviction that what you want is right and you will be unwilling to revamp your plans at all. You will not be one to subordinate yourself to others and your greatest chance for success will be in business for yourself or with someone else who fully understands you. You do not beat around the bush; you speak your thoughts without considering how they sound or who they will affect. You criticise, not to be mean, but because you feel that what you say is true. You like to get down to brass tacks; you wade through detail hurriedly and prefer to devote your time and attention to the broader and more important matters of policy formation, &c.

Born on December 7, you are undoubtedly the boss in your home. Everything revolves about you and everything is done for your convenience. You are rather autocratic. You are methodical and orderly and you expect others to pattern themselves after you. Yours is not a sympathetic nature and you feel that you have little time to be kind. You are much inclined to complain in a loud voice when things go wrong or when you are displeased; those who work for you in your home or at the office live in fear of you. Life is not easy around you.

Ethically Speaking.

One who writes much on the game of Bridge finds that there are submitted to him not only questions involving the bidding and play of the hand, but matters of ethics as well. There is no game which has a higher standard of ethics than Bridge. It is necessary for the continued popularity of Bridge that this be so, because players inclined to be unethical could, for a short period, reap a rich profit by unethical or sharp practice against ethical players.

Typical of many of these questions bearing on the matter of ethics is the following:

"I was Declarer, playing the hand at six spades doubled, vulnerable. The Opening lead (at my left) was the Ace of diamonds. Having none in the closed hand, I trumped. My next lead (from my hand) was the King of spades, and as I pulled it out, instead came the nine of diamonds, which dropped down on the table. I grabbed it back quickly, after letting out a gasp. I was on the point of commenting on it when I remembered that I had read somewhere that if you accidentally revoked and your opponents did not call your attention to it, not to mention it. So I kept still. I made six spades. Opponents said, 'Well done.' They had not noticed my diamond revoke. As it happened, diamonds were not led again until mine fell at the end. Our opponents were satisfied. One said: 'Made six,' when my partner burst out: 'Down two!' I told him he had no business to say that or give them 500. He is an expert player here and was very emphatic and positive, and further went on to comment that we were playing a friendly game and wanted our contracts honestly—as if I had been cheating. Although we have thrashed it over at our Bridge club, and other good players say he is wrong, he is still very positive and unbending in his own opinion of the matter. He is wrong, isn't he?"

This question was submitted to me by a lady in Honolulu and to it I made the following response:

The ethical issue you raise is covered by Section 3 of the Supplement of the Laws, which reads as follows:

"It is not wrong, except as specially provided in the case of Dummy, to warn a partner against infringing any rule of the game, e. g., against calling, leading or playing out of turn. Nor is it wrong to keep silent in regard to a revoke by one's own side except where it is a revoke in the twelfth trick."

Thus in the particular case which you cite there was no ethical obligation upon either you or your partner to call attention to the fact that you had revoked. It would have been ethically wrong for you to have attempted to conceal the revoke by failing to play the diamond on a subsequent trick if diamonds were led during the course of the play. It would have been ethically wrong for you to have attempted to conceal the revoke by claiming the tricks and not exposing the entire hand at any time during the course of the play. But if you did neither of these things and played the diamond face up upon the table where your adversaries could see it, and claim the penalty for a revoke, then you in no way violated the code of ethics laid down for the government of the game of Bridge.

Bridge players should always be quick to concede every right to their opponents. If they have violated the laws in any way the payment of the penalty should be immediate and ungrudging. They are not, however, the guardians of their adversaries. No player should ever intentionally revoke, but if he has unintentionally revoked then it is up to his opponents to enforce the proper penalty.

Tomorow's Hand.

What should be the successive steps in the bidding, and what the eventual contract reached by the East and West players on these cards?

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

What's in Fashion?

Real Hair in Fashion Again On the Christmas Doll Crop

Directed by Amos Parrish

New York, Dec. 7.—Whatever Fashion may be thinking of decreeing about long or short hair for women, there's no question what is the new coiffure fashion for dolls. Many of the new dolls are going in for hair again . . . not the painted-on kind, but hair which can be brushed, combed and arranged as the small mother wills. Plenty of it, too. Gorgeous luxurious crops in blonde, brunette or titian shades.

Many of the best-looking dolls sport feminine, alluring curls. One of the curly girlies is sketched at the top right.

They have new outfits, too. Not only play and party frocks, but nighties, pajamas and snappy riding habits with jodhpurs and shinny boots.

New Fabric Dolls.

Another fashion in dolls . . . not exactly new in idea but new in interpretation . . . is the fabric doll. Not at all the rag doll type you think at first. But soft, cuddly, beautifully made and with considerable character in faces and costumes.

One of these is dressed in frilled gingham, with fat curved legs neatly socked and slippered, and real curls escaping from her bonnet.

The doll sketched at the upper left of the picture combines a composition head with soft fabric body. He goes to sleep and for one so tiny is "a really lovely baby."

For Sophisticates.

Another fabric doll we saw has curly hair, long wicked eyelashes, a faintly haughty expression and a very frilly frock. She's rather a sophisticated young person and needs a sophisticated mama.

Rubber babies which can be bathed as often as they need it (or whenever their owner feels the urge) are still popular as they were last year. The newest rubber rascal is hard-headed, with go-to-sleep eyes and eyelashes, neither of which will be damaged by submersion.

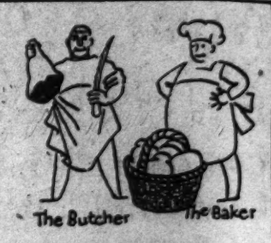
Nursery Characters.

Nursery book character dolls are crying for a place in the stocking. The Three Little Pigs, of course, are everywhere—pink and joyous—sometimes accompanied by the Big Bad Wolf.

Alice in Wonderland has stepped through the Looking Glass onto the doll counter. The one we saw (sketched at the lower left) has a slightly world-weary expression, but her pinafore, apron, slippers and head band are perfect.

Dolls of the type described below are on sale in Washington in all the better class shops.

The Family Marketer



Pork Is at Lowest Price During Hog-Killing Season.

"This is the hog-killing season," said the market butcher. "Everybody's killing the pigs to cure the hams, so there are lots of fresh pork loins on the market."

"Then I suppose the fresh pork sausage is in the market for the same reason." The Marketer hoped it was an intelligent observation.

"Right. The pork loins are going to be our week-end special, selling at 12 cents a pound. The sausage is 15 cents a pound."

"I see that calves' liver is only 25 cents a pound." The Marketer made a note of it.

"That's another of our specials. And we're selling legs o' lamb at 15 cents a pound."

"What about beef?"

"Prime rib roast is 18 cents a pound. Sirloin, round and porterhouse steaks are all 18 cents, too."

Living is not such a terrible expense, after all, thought the Marketer.

"What's that black cheese?"

"It's called New York State Coon Cheese. A wonderful purchase. I'll tell you all about it." The market man went to his huge icebox and brought out one.

"After the cheese is about one year old it is covered with a black wax and laid on a shelf to cure. It is a sharp cheese, and many people who prefer that kind buy it."

"And for how much money?"

"It's 40 cents a pound. Mild American cheese is 18 cents a pound."

Strawberries are coming, astonishingly priced at this time of year at 15 cents a pint. They come from California to cheer up the Christmas dinner tables.

Paper-shell pecans are 20 cents a pound. Diamond brand walnuts are two pounds for 45 cents, mixed nuts are 20 cents a pound.

Spinach sells at two pounds for 25 cents, kale and turnip greens, 5 cents a pound, cauliflower is 15 cents a head.

Cooking apples are seven pounds for 25 cents, eating, 5 pounds for the same price.

Apple Fritters.

1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar

New Skyscraper Heels Vie With Heelless Shoes

The One Gives Elegance; the Other Reduces Height of Tall Woman.

New York, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Two new heels are slated for a spring premiere in the shoe fashion world.

Strictly speaking, one of these isn't new, but a return of the very tall Venetian heel—taller than American women have worn for 16 years. And the other is hardly a heel at all. It's a cotillion slipper, practically heelless, and is expected to be popular with tall women.

At the convention of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association, where a spring line was shown yesterday, it was said that a Washington woman has ordered 12 pairs of these cotillion slippers in gold kid.

The return of the extremely high heel proves beyond doubt the rebirth of an elegant mode—the fact that women again are dressing to please men. Most of these heels are set further under the foot than is customary. To provoke interest, when the wearer gathers up the train of her evening gown, some are jeweled, and some of a brilliant color.

Heel interest, and sometimes applique at the back of the shoe, give the new footwear a streamlined appearance.

Other spring shoe facts brought to light were as follows:

Instead of gray shoes, string, a new beige tone, will be worn.

Soldier blue, a medium blue with a grayish tinge, will in large part replace navy.

Rose-colored golf shoes will be seen. Bavarian rose is the shade, and the shoes are calfskin. Bavarian rose kid also will appear as a trimming on footwear of navy calf.

Shoes that have eyelets will be described as "airified."

More grain leathers and more perforations will appear in men's shoes, to go with the new suiting plaids and checks. A vogue for brown buck is expected, and also an increase in black patent leather pumps, to go with white mess jackets and dinner coats.

Women's stockings are going to be darker, and (can it be possible?) thinner.

First Nighters Win Producers' Rebuke

Late Arrivals Stand Until First Curtain Drops.

Another new phase of the theater is the efforts of producers and authors to reform first night audiences. The usual gathering of celebrities at premieres has long drawn criticism for their tardiness and rude manners.

When a curtain was advertised at 8:30, it usually meant that about half the first night audience would not arrive until about the middle of the first act. The confusion of finding their seats in the dark upset the audience and unnerved the actors.

So when his recent new play opened, George Kaufman refused seats to most of the regular Broadway crowd of the well-knowns. Only the regular critics were admitted, and only one rival manager gained entrance.

Kaufman was irked at the cold reception given his musical show, "Let 'Em Eat Cake," so he vowed that no more would he invite the clique of movie stars, producers, Wall Streeters, chorus girls, debutantes and others who make it a fetish to attend first nights.

The Theater Guild has a more subtle but effective method of chastising its first nighters. Those who arrive late are not allowed to take their seats until after the curtain is lowered on the first scene.

Night Life?—Capital Has None, Sighs Frenchman, Who Suggests Envoys Start Some

Here's First Aid For Bald Man's Glistening Pate

A Beauty Salon Affirms It Can Raise Hair Upon It.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A husband's bald head is a wife's responsibility now that a Connecticut avenue salon is making such reassuring offers to cultivate the growth of hair on shiny pates.

She must have been there many times herself for a henna pack or an invigorating shampoo. Now it's up to her to make an appointment for her husband, and if necessary drag him by the few remaining strands to a first treatment. After that he'll go without coaxing. The application of fragrant oils and the stimulating scalp massage will prove a pleasure he'll not care to resist.

And as for the wife, while her husband is in one booth having the bald head treated, she can sit in another and enjoy a hot oil reconditioning shampoo. If her hair is dry, or oily, if it's anything it shouldn't be, she may rest assured that one of these shampoos will do wonders for it.

First the hair is brushed free of surface dust, and then a little reconditioning oil is heated and massaged into the scalp where it is allowed to remain from ten minutes to half an hour. During the last few minutes hot compresses are wrapped around the head to help the oil to penetrate. Then a lathery shampoo with an olive castile soap. A thorough rinsing, a 20 to 30 minute massage, and the job is done.

The reconditioning oil, a specialty of the salon, may be bought there or at any shop carrying that line of hair preparation. Its easy mode of application makes it ideal for home use.

The black and white check batn sets on sale in a downtown store will prove a temptation to shoppers.

A neat white box with a cellophane cover incloses a black and white check bath mat, two large turkish bath towels, two guest towels and two wash cloths, all in white with checked borders.

Black and white is always a safe combination for gifts, but if she's looking for a set to follow out a color scheme she may also buy this one in red, green, coral or blue checks.

This season when all eyes focus on bags it's necessary to pay more than slight attention to matching, or at least blending them with our frocks. It would be expensive if stores didn't come to our rescue occasionally with offers such as a large one on F street is making now. Just drop by and see! There are any number of fetching brocades in sundry colors and designs, gold green, orchid, blue, some with chains, some without, all of them with change purses and little mirrors, for the small sum of 65 cents

Christmas does not only mean turkey and pudding, but lots of choice candies, too. It's rather alarming when we look around to see what we have to serve them in. There's a cut-glass plate, a china dish, but very little of anything else. But, ah, yes, those sweetmeat trays we saw in an F street shop! They'll be the very things. Several pottery compartments fit into a wooden box covered with bright Florentine designs. They have a Yuletide air about them which will make them extremely appropriate for the coming holidays. Price, 50 cents.

Rhinestones are for formal frocks, wooden jewelry for sports wear, but crystal jewelry suits that in-between occasion.

As a usual thing there's nothing particularly individual about it, but such is not the case with the bracelets, necklaces, earrings and beads featured by a downtown store. The different pieces come in several styles which adapt them to any manner of different frocks. There are long beads for tall people, chokers for short ones, drop earrings for the siren type, buttons for the tomboy. The price ranges from $1 to $1.95.

The newest thing in compacts is a startling departure from the usual pattern. These are long, flat and slender, looking like nothing we ever saw before in their shiny nickel-plate containers. One side holds loose powder and rouge. The other opens up into a cigarette case with ample space for eight or ten cigarettes.

Any of us who suffer from cluttered purses will welcome these new models which at least keep the powder, rouge and cigarette situation somewhat tidy.

If anything is worse than cold feet it's cold hands. They're terribly uncomfortable and absolutely unnecessary. An F street shop has some warm, woolly, angora gloves which are safeguards against any zeros the old thermometer chooses to register. They come in brown, tan, or white, and the price is $1.25

It's All in the Way You Feel About It.

By Katherine Smith.

I knew a man once who had
Only a dime.
He said he was happier
Than if he had Nine million, because
It is sadder to lose nine million
Than one

Dime

But I have only one
Love,
And if I should lose this only one,
I think the loss would be Greater than if
One were

Those Amazing Parisiennes Are Wearing Wood!

Not for Whole Ensembles Though; Just for Trimmings.

Paris (AP).—Wood styles are next.

Many a chic Parisienne wears her "woodens" with her woolens, for scores of smart accessories designed for sports and street clothes are made of cedar, walnut, hickory or pine.

Wooden watches are the newest trick. A prominent jeweler has evolved a wrist watch made of walnut polished to a high degree and clamped to the wrist with a dull silken cord of the same color.

Bracelets and rings made of wood are "the last word" in smart accessories to wear with wool sports frocks. Rings are cut like big, smooth signets, while bracelets are large polished hoops.

Wooden clips are snapped to the neckline of several daytime wool frocks. One designer makes them in the shape of a brown leaf with fine gold veins, while another cuts them like a smooth polished almond.

Buttons and clips of wood fasten many winter coats and frocks. Sometimes they are enameled in bright colors, sometimes oiled and polished to show the grain of the wood, but almost invariably they match the gloves or other accessory rather than the frock itself. Few are round. Oblong lozenges, clover leaves and triangles are more in vogue.

One smart Parisian wears a brown wool coat collared in brown astrakhan with a carnation red wool frock fastened with walnut triangle clips, while another wears a gray wool fastened with wood lozenges enameled a brilliant black.

Wooden bags are among the most striking novelties of the season, they are made in the form of a very thin book, giving the effect of a slender wooden envelope and lined with bright wool.

Into that same bag the Parisian tucks a number of wooden accessories. She takes her cigaret from a case of polished bird's eye maple made in the form of a little address book and powders her nose from a round walnut compact almost as flat as a pancake.

Home-Made Cookies And Jams Nice Gifts

This is the time of year when the same question is wrinkling many brows—What to give for Christmas?

The solution to this problem is simple enough. Give home-made foods of one kind and another. They are inexpensive and, besides, the whole family of the receiver can share in the pleasure of such presents.

Cookies cut in odd shapes! Lovely cakes! And certainly jams and jellies are even more suitable because they need not be consumed at once but can be kept indefinitely. This is no small advantage in the holiday season when larders are crowded with perishable foods.

Everybody from your favorite aunt to your next-door neighbor will welcome a box containing three or six or a dozen glasses of jam and jellies made from different fruits. A few midget glasses added to the others would make the gift even more interesting. And, of course, the package can be done up attractively with gold and silver paper, Christmas ribbons and a sprig of holly as the final touch.

Pities American Women

MRS. O. A. MERRITT-HAWKES, British writer, here on her way home from Persia, insists American women are slaves—of themselves, of traditions, and of their husbands.

Charlotte and Mirez (left), Spanish dancers, and Carmencita (right), Rumba dancer. Mr. Vulliet believes the embassies in Washington should feature at their entertainments the dances of their own land.

Poor American Women!—This British Writer Pities Them

They're Bound, Shackled. Mrs. Merritt-Hawkes Declares.

American women, seen through the eyes of a British newspaper woman, have less freedom than any women in the world.

Mrs. O. A. Merritt-Hawkes, special travel correspondent for the Northern News Services in London, in Washington on her way home from a trip to Persia, sat in her suite at the Roosevelt Hotel and talked commiseratingly of the women of the United States.

"When I first came to this country several years ago," she said, "I thought I was coming to the land of the free. Imagine my surprise to find women here absolutely shackled.

"It isn't the laws of the country which are responsible. It's purely their own fault. They bind themselves with so much superficiality that they can't break through.

"I've met many American women in Europe and have always been impressed with their brightness, and quick repartee. I often remarked on their wide scope of learning. When I came over here and met them at home I was terribly disappointed to find the vast majority had only a surface knowledge of anything.

"They're slaves to fashion, too. Any woman who dares to dress just as she pleases is regarded as peculiar. And I understand that nothing is worse here than to be thought peculiar."

Mrs. Merritt-Hawkes refuses to let fashion dictate terms to her. She wears what she pleases regardless of the current mode. At this interview she was dressed in comfortable brogans, a bright plaid skirt, and a soft lacy blouse. She wore her hair brushed carelessly back from her small eager face.

"You women of America are slaves to the men as well as to yourselves," she insisted, relentlessly pursuing her indictment. "In all my travels I have never seen women so completely bound to men by sentiment as those in this country. I've often heard of henpecked American husbands, but where are they? All I see are wives adoringly submissive.

"Russian women are the freest I have ever found! They are not bound to families, their relations with men are comparatively free, but in most cases judicially so. They have their own jobs, their own lives to lead, and they do so as units of a community."

Mrs. Merritt-Hawkes has written many articles on the life and psychology of the people in foreign lands. She never travels as a tourist, but always remains many months and lives as the people do themselves to better absorb the atmosphere. The information she gleaned from her recent sojourn in Persia she intends to put in book form as soon as she returns to England.

Marx Brothers Get First Repeal Drink

Groucho Insists They Beat Every One in Film Land.

Hollywood, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The four Marx brothers today claimed the honor of having had the first legal drink in the United States since 1920, and branded as "impostors" Benjamin Decasseres and others who contested the claim.

"We Marx brothers," said Groucho, spokesman for the group, "play second drink to no man."

It might seem a paradox that the fourth of the four brothers, Harpo, was in Russia, but that very fact was used by the film comedians in claiming a clean sweep.

"If somebody could have beaten the three of us who actually are in Hollywood—which we doubt—that somebody could not have beaten the Marx brothers, for we cabled Harpo to start drinking vodka an hour before prohibition was declared dead," said Groucho.

"In fact, Zeppo was all split to pieces. The drink he started at 3:32 p. m. yesterday afternoon was half illegal and half legal, for, though he drank it straight down, he didn't finish until 3:33 p. m. mountain standard time. The amendment was repealed at 3:32:30, as I understand it."

Danish Wife of Irish Minister To Have Paintings Exhibited

Mrs. Michael MacWhite Is an Artist of International Reputation.

A life-long love for the out-of-doors, translated poignantly into landscapes in oil, places the cultured Danish wife of Michael MacWhite, Minister of the Irish Free State, in the list of modern artists to be reckoned with.

Her work is to be exhibited at the Roerich Museum in New York next February; and recently one of her pictures—a canal scene in Verona, Italy—was hung in the Dublin Museum of Modern Art.

Mrs. MacWhite.

Mrs. MacWhite paints her landscapes in the spring and summer.

"Nature is so lovely then, and just to be out doors is a treat for any one. I long to paint the winter scenes; snow, ice-jeweled trees, but alas, I have a sensitive throat which won't permit my braving the cold. So, during the winter months, I content myself painting still lifes and portraits.

"Some day, I hope to be more skilled with portraits. Although I really feel I do landscapes best."

The walls of her charming apartment in the Shoreham, where she is spending the winter, were hung with many of her paintings. Scenes from Ireland, Italy, France, Denmark and the United States, done in vivid oils, show her remarkable feeling for the out-of-doors. An occasional portrait and still life bespeak her versatility in the medium of oils.

From her seat on a low divan, Mrs. MacWhite, smart in navy blue chiffon, surveyed her paintings with a speculative eye, and confessed a lively interest as to how her work will be accepted by the American public. This will be her first exhibit in this country.

"I can't see them quite impersonally, of course," she confessed. "It will be very interesting to learn what the American public thinks of them. I've no idea how they'll be accepted. Maybe they aren't really good."

Mrs. MacWhite, who is a sought-after member of international diplomatic society, first studied art in her native Denmark. Subsequent years were spent at Academie Julian in Paris. One of her earliest works, a Venetian water scene in strange, sharp blue and orange, hangs in her Washington apartment.

Mrs. Roosevelt Guest at Women Voters' Dinner

Guest List Included Many Women Notables of Capital.

(Associated Press.)

Dolly Madison's old home, now the Cosmos Club, was the scene last night of a League of Women Voters' dinner, honoring women now prominent in the official scene, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The visit of the President's wife was brief. She had to hurry on to hear her husband make an address before a church gathering.

But she remained long enough to cause history lovers to wonder what Mrs. Madison, who was described as "most commanding personality in Washington through four Administrations," would have commented could she have foreseen the party held last night in her house.

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, was obliged to send regrets, but the guest list included such feminine notables as Representative Isabella S. Greenway, of Arizona; Mrs. C. C. Rumsey, of NRA; that long-established trio, Grace Abbott, head of the Children's Bureau; Mary Anderson, head of the Women's Bureau, and Louise Stanley, head of the Home Economics Bureau; Mrs. Lucille McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner; Mrs. Jewell Swofford, employes Compensation Commissioner, and Miss Annabel Matthews, of the Tax Appeals Board.

All looked to the President's wife as an active leader on the feminine front. The active part she took in New York won for her a high place in the League of Women Voters.

Other Washingtonians repeated a comment heard more and more often—that Eleanor Roosevelt might be regarded as "successor to Dolly Madison" in the prominent role she has played since entering the White House.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

"There will be a nurse there in a few minutes."

That is the kind of action one gets when Miss Gertrude H., Bowling, executive director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, receives a call for the services of her organization. It is also the kind of action that Miss Bowling applies to any welfare work in which she takes a part and as she is a member of the board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies and former chairman of its health committee, a member of the board of directors of the Washington Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, and also of the Washington Institution of Mental Hygiene, as well as being a trustee of the Community Chest, her welfare hours are pretty well filled. She is eagerly sought as a committee member and few welfare meetings take place without her presence.

MISS GERTRUDE H. BOWLING.

"I believe it is more important to prevent than to cure," Miss Bowling says. "For this reason I am chiefly interested in the public health organizations and in the social organizations that prevent social breakdowns. As a board member of the Washington Institute for Mental Hygiene and the Washington Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and as the executive of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, I feel that all three of these organizations have to do with the removal of the causes of illness, the prevention of the spread of disease, and education in the home which makes for healthier children, and, in the last analysis the health of the children of today determines the health of the future citizens of Washington for tomorrow."

Thinks Embassy Should Give Taste of National Fun Making

Young Parisian Journalist Regrets We Have No Spots Where a Man May Feel Like an Apache for a While.

Andre Vulliet, young Parisian writer, is in this country to study the methods of American journalism. During his brief stay in Washington he has seen something of the night life of the Capital—but it does not seem so gay and carefree to him as that of the Paris he left behind. It may be he is merely homesick. It may be he has reason on his side, and we Americans really do not know how to enjoy ourselves. Mr. Vulliet believes the foreign envoys might serve as good will missionaries in this regard. In the following article he presents his idea.

By Andre Vulliet.

Now, what is night life? When does it begin and where does it end? Theoretically, it extends from sunset to dawn. Practically, its definition is just about as vague and subjective as that of inflation. Everyone has his own views on the matter. But, removing from the question all its moral sides, it may be said of night life that it is far less dangerous than inflation. For, after all, one can do with his nights as he pleases without provoking economic chaos or international retaliations. See how vast the field is!

But anyway, one of the ideas of night life is to help us get out of our own self. What we need is new surroundings and a new atmosphere. Paris has hundreds of places like that. You can go from a Spanish cabaret to a Russian night club, hear in turn Negro jazz or Argentine tangos, feel like a student or like an "apache."

Everywhere the waiters, the decoration, the lights are such as to provide you with the atmosphere you want. Like the Scotchman whose doctor had ordered him to travel, you can let your imagination wander and become for a minute a torrero, a gaucho or a Cossack, a millionaire or a fisherman.

Must Be Refined.

Don't tell me you can get the same thing in America. What you have in New York, for instance, are regular foreign places in the respective sections of the city. And the moment a place becomes really Spanish or Italian or anything else it ceases to be in vogue. It is a refuge for, its natives, often located in a lurid section, sometimes dangerous. It lacks that refinement so indispensable to international night-goers. For night club habitues like the thrill of exotism, can stand a touch of danger, but can not long endure the contact with real life.

It is not what we are looking for when we want distraction. The "Oh, my dear, didn't that place look really French!" is all we want. But that we do want. I remember a very chic place in Paris. It was supposed to evoke South America and its plantations of coffee. The seats were made of coffee sacks. Nothing dangerous about the place. It was not even comfortable. But since it was in a night club it was simply delightful.

This is utterly lacking in Washington. There are a few night clubs. But they are too conservative. Same style, same music that you have already heard all day over the radio. There is no thrill, no magic ticket for a fancy trip around the world.

And right there lies a marvelous opportunity for the embassies. They have missed it. They could have given to Washington social life that touch of color, that exotic flavor which alone make night life worth its salt.

Embassy Balls.

I see magnificent balls if only the embassies were what they ought to be—a perfect representation of their respective countries. First of all, it is a question of architecture. Why not a Spanish Embassy of Hispano-Moorish style with the Granada gardens in the back, or a Swiss Legation built after the charming "chalets" of the Alps? Why not a Florentine palace surrounded by cypresses fine and elegant as those of the Fiesole hills? I also would like to see a Japanese garden in which you can never hide because the trees are so small.

I'd say nothing of architecture if some efforts were made toward a more colorful staging of the "fete." Each envoy comes over with his own cook. It would be just as necessary to have a sort of stage or art director, since it is equally important that the eyes and the intellectual feelings of embassy guests should be pleased. Particularly as regards the costumes and music. Ancient kings knew that side of propaganda when they sent their ambassadors abroad with a large retinue of musicians and rich presents and pageantry.

Imagine how unforgettable it would be to dance at the British Embassy under the stern look of Highlanders who would every now and then strike up a little air on their bag-pipes or dance an old-fashioned "gigue."

A Real Tango.

The Argentine Embassy would have the privilege of being the only place in Washington, and perhaps in America, where musicians dressed up as gauchos would play that most beautiful of all dances, the tango. A singer with a harsh voice would evoke for us the nostalgia of the great expanses.

And think of what could be done at the Cuban Embassy with a real rumba orchestra and a few exhibitions showing us at last how it must be danced!

Our last hope lies in the Russian Embassy. But I am afraid the new ambassador will not bring to Washington the Cossacks and the Volga songs.

Alas, for want of an example coming from the embassies, things will remain as they are. We'll find everywhere the same butlers in knee breeches and brass button liveries. We'll keep on coming across the same orchestras, probably the best of Washington. It may be that the tunes will be different (although not much), but the rhythm will always be the same and the ballroom and the atmosphere and, above all, that worst of American institutions, cutting in.

Stop Cutting In!

The fact that the music practically never stops makes that custom a barbaric one. For there is only one or two alternatives. If the girl is a poor dancer and can not make up for that deficiency by a certain amount of charm, the first boy who puts her into circulation has no way out. If, on top of it, the orchestra turns patriotic and starts playing those National tunes like "Home, Sweet Home," the Virginia or Maryland march, "Three Little Pigs," &c., the people get into such a frenzy that there is no end to it. And in such a case even your best friends won't help you out. I know! It happened to me once. I thought only a declaration of war could put an end to my martyrdom.

And now, what happens if the girl is a peach and a perfect dancer? Nothing at all. You have no time because you are cut in immediately. And that is the trouble.

"Discovering" New Stars in Hollywood—Screen and Stage Bills for New Week

Players Often Groomed Long For Film Fame

Sergava on Call a Year; Unusual Short Reel; About Showshops.

The flamboyant tints of imaginative press agentry, it seems, sometimes color West Coast reports of "new discoveries" among the cinema's potential stars. Some of these "discoveries," one is led to believe, have been there right along.

For example, there is a young woman known as Kathryn Sergava, now in Hollywood, about whom there recently has been considerable to-do. Heralded as another Garbo—and that makes quite an army of them, by the way—much store has been placed in the latent ability whereby it is expected she will be able to scramble quickly to the top.

Although Miss Sergava is reputed to detest being known as one of the countless Garbo "doubles," it is said by those who have seen her that she bears a stronger resemblance to the silent Swede than any other actress upon whom the cameras ever have been trained.

Stood By, In Case—

Because of this resemblance, Kathryn was given a year's contract long ago by Garbo's company, when it was feared that Garbo's long threatened and often postponed trip home to Sweden might result in her permanent absence abroad and consequent abandonment of American films. Miss Sergava, presumably, was being groomed to take her place. But Garbo came back.

During the year of waiting—when she drew a salary check every week and had nothing whatever to do, cinematically—Miss Sergava was not idle. She took a dancing lesson every day, rode horseback, swam, took sun baths and otherwise continued the activities that might be expected of a young woman who came to this country a dancer, but a dancer with screen aspirations.

Within a few days after her agreement to "stand by" had expired, she had signed a new contract with another company. It is a different sort of document. She is assured that she will be kept busy and already, as a matter of fact, has had parts in two pictures, with greater things to follow.

Knows What She Likes.

She is quite frank in her own estimate of herself and definite in her notions of what she wants to do.

"Every blond foreigner is likened to Garbo," Kathryn says. "I am not an exotic personality; I am a very ordinary person who likes outdoor sports and music and books and people.

"I hope the studio doesn't try to surround me with a lot of mystery And give me 'dressed up,' bizarre roles. I'd much rather play simple, human, everyday characters than any other kind."

Kathryn, originally Katya, was born in Russia 23 years ago. Nine years ago she came to America with her mother and since then she has become an American citizen.

And that is how "new discoveries" are made!

Gerald Miller, who is well known in dramatic circles throughout the Middle West, is directing "Icebound" for the Columbia Players as his first contribution to Washington amateur dramatics. Mr. Miller has come to this city from Champaign, Ill., where, under his direction, the Champaign County Farm Players won the recent State play tournament. Previous to that, Mr. Miller had been director of the Evansville, Ind., and Springfield, Ill., little theaters, and appeared in many plays, both professional and amateur, in those cities.

Home-Town Girl.

Now that the wave of editorial encomiums and press-agent panegyrics has to some extent subsided, it might be of interest to those not numbered among the circle of her personal friends in Washington to know that Patricia Bowman, premiere danseuse of the "Ziegfeld Follies," at the National, was born and educated in this city, where she earned much of her early experience as a member of the St. Patrick's Players.

At the age of 15 she was discovered by George White and signed for two years to dance in the "Scandals." At the age of 18, Samuel Lionel Rothafel—"Roxy" to you-all guys—appointed the youthful Miss Bowman to one of the most important dancing posts in the American theater, prima ballerina of the Roxy Theater in New York, a position she held for four years, breaking all records for consecutive performances. She recently resigned the same distinguished post at the Radio City Music Hall, also under the personal direction of Roxy

Her present engagement with the "Follies" is largely in the nature of a loan from Mr. Rothafel to Mr. Shubert. It has been estimated that more than 25,000,000 people have seen Patricia Bowman dance.

She is worth it.

With "Zwei Herzen im ¾ Takt"—"Two Hearts in Waltz Time"—scheduled for screening tomorrow night in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, announcement is made that another German - made film, "Luise Koenigen Von Preussen," will be shown in the same auditorium on December 22. Based on the novel, "Luise," by Walter von Molo, and directed by Carl Froelich, "Luise Koenigen Von Preussen" possesses none of the excitement of battle or conflict, but is a handsome historical film offering a lovely portrayal of a lovable queen. It has been highly acclaimed, like "Zwei Herzen," in other leading cities.

A Wonder of Nature.

In "Aniakchak," a two-reeler that will supplement the feature picture, "Duck Soup," with the Four Marx Brothers, at Loew's Palace Theater beginning tomorrow, theatergoers will view one of the most amazing pilgrimages imaginable into the mouth of the world's largest and most active volcano.

"Aniakchak" is the largest active crater in the world, and Father Bernard Hubbard, famous "glacier priest" and Alaskan explorer, in company with a party of scientists, has pictorially recorded their adventures within this huge natural boiling pot.

After traversing two hemispheres and plumbing the depths of volcanoes for 20 years, Hubbard found in Alaska three of the largest active craters in the world.

Miraculous Escape.

He predicted the eruption of one of them, Mount Aniakchak, almost to the hour. Newspapers of the world carried the story of his miraculous escape when his plane was almost sucked into the burning depths.

A recent expedition took Hubbard back to Aniakchak, where this time his plane made a successful landing inside the crater walls, the first time a plane has been known to land inside a volcano. After several vain attempts, Hubbard and his intrepid band descended into the very abyss of the volcano, where they were treated to some of Nature's most amazing phenomena.

These are the starlting occurrences that constitute the subject matter of this picture.

And so, hurdling the short dash, we come to the other attractions comprising the stage and screen features of the bills that begin the new week of entertainment in the motion picture houses:

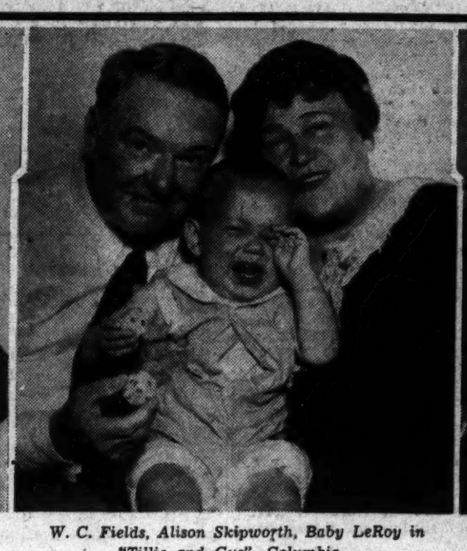
Clara Bow in "Hoopla"—Loew's Fox.

Dorothy Lee, "Buddy" Rogers in "Take a Chance"—Earle.

Buster Crabbe, Mary Carlisle in "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi"—Metropolitan.

Raquel Torres in "Duck Soup"—Palace.

Gloria Stuart in "The Invisible Man"—Rialto.



W. C. Fields, Alison Skipworth, Baby LeRoy in "Tillie and Gus"—Columbia.

Frances Dee in "Little Women"—RKO-Keith's.

Carnival Yarn For Clara Bow

Clara Bow, the fiery redhead, makes her latest screen appearance in "Hoopla," which Loew's Fox will present tomorrow together with a stage bill that is headed by East and Dumke, those popular "Sisters of the Skillet," of radio fame.

In "Hoopla," her second starring film since her return to the screen, Miss Bow depicts the part of a tempestuous carnival dancer, and the environment of the open-air shows forms an appropriate background for her constantly changing emotions and the vividness of her personality.

The story is built around this impetuous dancer, who makes a wager that she can win the love of the carnival barker's son. This youth has a nature that is far removed from the hectic surroundings of the carnival, and he falls an easy prey to the wiles of the dazzling dancer. The boy's father objects, and there follows a series of incidents in which these three attempt to straighten out their tangled lives.

The cast in support of Miss Bow is headed by Preston Foster and Richard Cromwell, and includes Herbert Mundin, James Gleason, Florence Richardson, Minna Gombell and Roger Imhof. Frank Lloyd directed this production from the stage play, "The Barker."

The Sisters of the Skillet specialize in humor, songs and insane patter. Others on the stage program are Brems, Fitz and the Murphy Brothers, the Twelve Aristocrats and Rita Delan, who present something new in dancing, and Spain's greatest wirist, Con Colleano.

A Phil Lampkin overture, news events, short subjects and a comedy complete the program.

An All-Comedy Bill at Earle

Warner Bros. Earle Theater, starting tomorrow, offers an all-laugh program on stage and screen, headed by Paramount's "Take a Chance," with James Dunn, June Knight, Cliff Edwards, Lillian Roth, Dorothy Lee and Buddy Rogers. Lillian Roth will also head the stage show.

"Take a Chance," a musical film, is a gay hit of nonsense concerning the careers of four carnival sideshow entertainers who become tired of small-town life and decide to snatch fame and fortune on Broadway. "Take a Chance" is said to have a much stronger plot than the usual musical film, besides boasting a chorus of Broadway's prettiest girls and at least five song hits.

Stepping right out of the screen picture onto the stage, Lillian Roth will entertain as headliner of the stage program with 15 minutes of blues songs, sung as only Lillian Roth can sing them. Others on the bill will be Ade Duval, master of magic, in "A Rhapsody in Silk;" "The Washboard Serenaders," and Audrey Siber, mistress of ceremonies. As a special attraction, Block and Sully, Broadway's favorites, will be seen.

The program will be completed by special short subjects, the new issue of the Graham McNamee Newsreel and the Earle Orchestral Prelude.

A Mad Quartet At the Palace

"Duck Soup" brings howling, gasping, side-aching laughs to Loew's Palace tomorrow, with the the Four Marx Brothers cavorting about, madder and nuttier than they ever have been before.

Through the efforts of the wealthy Margaret Dumont, Groucho is appointed dictator of Fredonia, a mythical kingdom, with Zeppo as his assistant. Louis Calhern, ambassador of a neighboring republic, attempts to foment a revolution with the aid of his three spies, Chico, Harpo and the beautiful Raquel Torres.

War becomes a reality and Chico and Harpo desert to Groucho's side and the mad Marxmen score a complete triumph in the most hilarious battle that history has ever heard of or seen, in which gas attacks are repulsed with bicarbonate of soda, and methods of warfare unheard of are employed.

"Duck Soup" unfolds eight reels of the maddest insanity yet to reach the screen.

Edwin Maxwell, Edmund Breese and others are cast in support of the Four Marx Brothers. "Duck Soup" is a Paramount production directed by Leo McCarey.

Writing honors for this screen lunacy go to Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby, Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin.

News events, short subjects and a comedy are added.

College Story On Met Screen

Catchy tunes, snappy dialogue, pretty girls and a crew race that spells the last word in thrilling climaxes, combine to make "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" an infectious, gay and, at times, thrilling photoplay. It opens tomorrow as the featured attraction at Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theater.

"The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" is a college story saturated with love, life and laughter; a college story brimming with music, but not a musical; a college story that for the first time in motion picture history does not concern itself with football, baseball, basket ball, cross-country or track meet contests—but features an eight-oared shell race, enacted by thirty-two youths of brain and brawn.

"Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" concerns Vivian, flirtatious coed known at Rawley University. Admired by all members of this fraternity, Vivian centers her attention upon Bob North.

Mary Carlisle is seen as Vivian and Buster Crabbe plays Bob North, the leading male role. The supporting cast includes Charles Starrett, Florence Lake, Edwin Tamblyn, Burr McIntosh, Purnell Pratt and Major Goodsell.

The musical embellishments are presented by Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra and staff of vocal favorites.

The program will be completed by a novelty song-reel featuring the "42nd Street" song writer, Harry Warren; Leon Errol in "Three Little Swigs," and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News.

Comedy Duo in Columbia Film

W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth, who created such a sensation in their episode in "If I Had a Million," are co-starred for the first time in "Tillie and Gus," a hilarious film comedy that opens at Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow.

In "Tillie and Gus" they represent a pair of divorced rascals who travel the globe as a pair of "missionaries." Only their missions are confined to gambling at dice and cards, at which they are both proficient, and not too honest.

They are reunited when informed of a possible inheritance in America, and on their return find that a shyster lawyer has dissipated the estate. They combine their talents and show the shyster how real cheating should be done.

"Tillie and Gus" has sparkling lines, rollicking situations and in W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth, one of the truly fine comedy teams of the screen.

Baby LeRoy, George Barbier, Edgar Kennedy, Jacqueline Wells and others, are listed in support. "Tillie and Gus" was filmed from an original by Rupert Hughes.

News events, a comedy and short subjects are added.

Katherine Hepburn and the others who have scored so sensationally in Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women," will continue to grace the screen of RKO-Keith's for still another week—the third!

"Little Women" has broken every record during the current engagement. More than 60,000 people saw the picture the first week and from present indications another 40,000 will have seen it when the current second week comes to a close.

Thus almost one quarter of Washington's population have been enthralled with the adventures of the four "Little Women" as portrayed by Miss Hepburn, Joan Bennett, Frances Dee and Jean Parker.

Walt Disney's now world famous "Silly Symphony" in color, "The Three Little Pigs" is also being continued.

Weird Picture Continues Run

The fantastic quality, the swift action, the wild and delightful suspense of "The Invisible Man" has caught Washington's fancy and interest and this most unusual of pictures is remaining at the Rialto Theater a second week.

You must see it to appreciate how startling and unique it really is. And the invisibility occurs before your very eyes—piece by piece or rather, arm and leg by arm and leg, with sections of the head tossed in for good measure.

James Whale, who directed "Frankenstein" directed "The Invisible Man." In the cast are Claude Rains, late of the Theater Guild; Henry Travers, also a Theater Guild product; Dudley Digges, a third Theater Guilder; Gloria Stuart, Una O'Connor, William Harrigan and Forrester Harvey.

R. C. Sherriff, who wrote "Journey's End," adapted the story from a novel by H. G. Wells.

The Rialto supplements its second "Invisible Man" week with a comedy, shorter screen novelties and Graham McNamee with the latest Universal News.

Chi Omega Will Hear Pennsylvania Portia

Miss Vashti Burr, former deputy attorney general of Pennsylvania, will be a guest speaker tonight at a dinner of Chi Omega Sorority.

Miss Burr, often referred to as "the modern Portia of Pennsylvania," is public relations director of Phi Delta Delta, women's legal sorority, and a member of the American Association of University Women.

Capital Youth Missing.

Police were asked yesterday to search for Lester Oliff, 24, of 543 Kentucky avenue southeast, missing since Monday, his mother said.

Interior Division Safe From Cuts

20,000 on Staff Assured No More Reduction.

The nearly 20,000 employes of the Interior Department need not fear that the new budget will require any drastic reduction in force, it was learned today.

This assurance of Interior brings to five the number of departments in which employes are practically safe from further economy cuts. Treasury, Commerce, Justice and Labor will not be forced by the Bureau of the Budget to cut their personnel, it has already been said. How the bureau will carry out its promised 30 per cent reduction in the new budget without dropping workers has not yet been learned.

Tuberculosis Seal Sale Lags, New Plea Issued

In an appeal for greater purchasing of Christmas seals, officials of the local Tuberculosis Association declared last night only 750,000 seals have been sold so far in the annual drive for health funds.

Appreciation for the response, however, came from Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, speaking for the society, who pointed out the funds are badly needed. She said that in a study of 46 large cities, Washington was revealed as having the fourth highest tuberculosis death rate.

4 Cleaners Here Facing Code Inquiry

Charged With Offering Prices Below Figures Set by NRA.

Johnson Threatens to Prosecute; 156 Others Summoned.

Threatened with prosecution unless they can justify their position, Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson yesterday summoned four Washington and suburban dry cleaners to answer charges that they had violated their NRA code by cleaning suits for less than 95 cents.

They are the Apollo Hat Cleaning Co., 1940 Fourteenth street northwest; New York Shoe Shining Parlor, 809 H. street northwest; J. R. Cleaners, 514 Ninth street northwest, and the Morninside Laundry Co., of Silver Spring.

At the Morningside Laundry, it was said the manager "had nothing to say" concerning the allegations, but at the Apollo and New York establishments reporters were told they had displayed signs offering to clean hats for 50 cents and suits for 75 cents until "men had come around saying we were violating the code and would have to chare 75 cents for hats and 95 cents for suits."

Hat Price Not in Code.

There is nothing in the code requiring cleaners to maintain any price on hats.

A man who said he was the Apollo manager said two men had called on him Saturday, one from the Palace and the other from the West laundry, and told him he would have to charge more. He said he raised his prices immediately.

The New York shoe spokesman said he was visited yesterday by a man from "the cleaning and dyeing association who told me it was a violation to clean hats for less than 75 cents or suits for less than 95 cents." He, too, said he raised his prices to conform.

Simultaneously, Gen. Johnson announced that officials of the Retail Cleaning Stores and Outlet Association, of New York, had been summoned to appear at an NRA hearing Monday to answer the allegation that it "has assumed leadership in a campaign to encourage cleaners to ignore the minimum price provisions of the cleaning and dyeing trade code."

156 Outsiders Summoned.

It is at this hearing that the Washington cleaners and 156 others from throughout the country will be called on to explain why they have not raised their prices from the old standard of 75 cents to the minimums prescribed recently by the code authority after recommendations had been made by representative members of the trade.

Three Virginia dry cleaners were among the 33 summoned yesterday by Johnson to answer to charges. They are the Home Dry Cleaners, of Bristol; the Pulaski Hat Shop, of Pulaski, and the Radford Cleaners and Dyers, of Radford.

Post's "Huck Finn" Portrait Displayed

The portrait of "Huckleberry Finn," which will be the subject of the annual Washington Post calendar for 1934, will be displayed for one week, beginning today, in the lobby of Lowe's Fox Theater.

Francis Fairall, 14, of 212 Third street northeast, was selected as the model for the portrait, which was done in oil by Charles Dunn, Washington portrait artist. The painting has attracted such wide attention on the part of art critics that it was determined to give it a more public exhibition and arrangements made for an appropriate setting in the Fox Theater lobby.

Hundreds of Post carrier boys were viewed by Mr. Dunn before he selected a model whom he considered the best personification of Mark Twain's famous boy character. The painting is life size against a neutral background that throws features of the figure into bold relief.

Transient Aid Here Increases

900 Helped Since Nov. 27; New Home Secured.

More than 900 homeless men and boys have received aid at the Transient Relief Agency since it opened November 27, Arthur S. Rosichan, supervisor, announced yesterday.

Due to the large number of transients applying for aid, the agency has been forced to seek additional sleeping quarters. Yesterday an old fire station at Fourteenth street and Ohio avenue northwest was turned over to the agency. It will quarter 100 men.

Other sleeping quarters in use are Third street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, 100 men, and 2100 Georgia avenue northwest, 175 men.

Women to Give Turkey Dinner.

A turkey dinner will be given at 5 p. m. today by the Women's Auxiliary of Rock Creek Episcopal Church. It will be held in conjunction with a Christmas bazaar in the parish auditorium, Rock Creek Church Road and Webster street northwest.

Famed Burnside G. A. R. Post, Cut to 15 Members, Disbands

F. J. YOUNG,
commander of Burnside Post, Grand Army of the Republic, which has been forced to disband by the losses of time. The unit once had 600 members. Now only 15 are left.

Commander Young Says Step Inevitable; Roster Once Listed 600.

Burnside Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, which once numbered 600 men whose deeds of valor held an heroic place in the history of the Civil War, has been disbanded. Commander F. J. Young called the roll for the last time this week, eight of his comrades answering their names. There are six others, besides Commander Young, but they were too feeble or disabled to attend the final meeting.

The passing of Burnside Post leaves only one other G. A. R. unit in Washington—Kit Carson Post, of which John Middleton is commander.

Interviewed yesterday in his home at 1457 Chapin street northwest, Commander Young was philosophical about the disbanding of his post, which had withstood time's withering assault for half a century.

Meetings Were Quiet.

Many, many years are theirs, and dimmed eyes and tottering frames, but their spirit will be the last to go the veteran said of his comrades, adding:

"We are getting old. Many of the boys could not attend our monthly meetings and when they were held the minutes were read and that was about all that was done. A few of the more active ones, though, may join up with Kit Carson Post."

One of the youngest of the 15 left from 600, Young enlisted as an artilleryman just 70 years ago at the age of 17. Despite his enthusiasm, he came near being rejected because of his tender years and a suspicion he had consumption. It was only through the intercession of a Union captain who had been his school teacher in Rochelle, Ill., that the stripling was accepted.

"If it was consumption I had," he reminisced, "the war cured it. I guess sleeping out in snow storms did some good."

He says he had the good fortune to take part in eight battles, Tupelo being the bloodiest. His most serious injury was a flesh wound in the shin caused by a deflected bullet.

Trial Job Lasted 42 Years.

A few years after the Civil War ended, Young came to Washington and took a job in the Treasury Department. It was a tryout, to test his mettle in clerical and auditing work, and was not guaranteed beyond six months. He stayed 42 years.

Bandit With Knife Robs Cigar Store

Gets $15 on Ninth Street and Escapes in Crowd.

Menacing Joseph Leinson, 25, clerk in a cigar store at 622 Ninth street northwest, with a large knife, a white man last night robbed the cash register of $15.

Carrying the knife in a paper bag, the man walked into the store and produced the weapon as soon as he perceived Leinson was alone. As Leinson delayed at the demand for money, the robber lunged at him, then took the money.

The intruder escaped on the crowded sidewalk warning Leinson not to summon help.

Two Witnesses In Wampler's Tax Trial Balk

Disbarred Lawyer, Woman Claim Testimony Incriminating.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 6 (AP).—Two witnesses today refused to testify in the case of T. Morris Wampler, Washington attorney being tried in Federal court here on a charge of violating income tax laws.

Both made their refusal on the grounds that their testimony would incriminate them. One was Norman S. Bowles, disbarred Washington attorney, and the other was Mrs. Leither Lowe, of Washington, who made a claim of $1,500 damages against Edward B. Dean, sr., Washington real estate operator, on charges of attempted assault.

Dean, according to the testimony, was Wampler's client, and part of the income which the Government contends was received and concealed by Wampler in 1930 and 1931 was derived from money Dean gave him to settle cases of four women.

Claims He was "Go-Between."

Bowles, according to the contention of Simon E. Sobeloff, U. S. District Attorney, acted as a sort of go-between in the various cases, providing lawyers for the women who made the claims and procuring through others the women themselves.

Mrs. Beatrice G. Cornelius, one of the women who claimed Dean had attempted to attack her, took the witness stand today. She testified that she had been sent to Dean by Arthur W. Lapin, who told her that Dean, who is now 80 years of age, had "lots of money and could not keep his hands off the girls."

She said that Lapin told her if Dean made any advances to her he (Lapin) would get her a lawyer.

"I was scared," the witness said, "but Lapin told me that Dean's lawyer was in on it, and the case would be settled out of court."

In reply to a question by John J. Ely, foreman of the jury, Mrs. Cornelius said that Lapin had said Wampler was Dean's attorney. She also testified she received $1,500 from Bowles for which she signed a release for Dean.

Later, she said, Bowles had her sign a receipt saying she had received $11,000 in settlement for her claim, and that Bowles had given her $250 more after she signed the paper.

Dean Tells of Payments.

Dean testified during the first two days of the trial that he had given Wampler $16,000 with which to settle the Cornelius claim, $44,000 for the claim made by Miss Lillian Belasco, $35,000 for a settlement of the claim of Christine Rock, and in addition to the $15,000 he had turned over to Wampler to settle the Lowe claim.

Albert D. Esher, the attorney who represented Miss Rock, testified he received $20,000 in settlement for the claim.

Poverty Kept 192 Children Out of School

Pupils and Teachers Help Needy, Board of Education Told.

Report for Week Here Is Improvement Over October Period.

Lack of clothing and other necessities caused 192 children to be absent from school for the week ended November 24, it was revealed to the Board of Education yesterday in a report from Miss Fay L. Bentley, director of school attendance and work permits.

This is a slight improvement over the report of similar conditions for the week ended October 20, when 211 children were absent for such causes.

The amount of $4,752, obtained from school funds and donations from pupils and teachers, was spent on needy children during the week, it was disclosed. This money was for clothing, food, carfare, shoe repairs and eye glasses.

A total of $42.28 was given children for haircuts, transportation to clinics and for school materials. Of this sum, $9.57 was earned by high school students through service in the school cafeterias.

Will Attend Liquor Hearing.

The 192 absent children included 172 in elementary schools, 14 in junior high, 1 in senior high, 2 in vocational and 3 in parochial schools.

"The school personnel," Miss Bentley told the board, "is making a real contribution in preventing absences."

At the request of Henry Gilligan, board member, representatives of the board will attend the hearing on the District liquor code tomorow to urge that liquor-selling places be kept as far as possible from schools.

Superintendent Frank W. Ballou told the board that relief authorities had not yet given him any indication that funds will be allotted for the employment of jobless teachers for adult education and care of nursery schools. The superintendent said he had asked for clerks and additional personnel in the Community Center Department.

Teachers Give to Chest.

Teachers and other school employes have contributed $26,065.05 to the Community Chest, it was announced. This is 61 per cent of the quota for schools and represents 5,233 pledges.

A repercussion of the boxing issue arose when Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, colored member, who was absent when the board voted to open public school gymnasiums for intercollegiate boxing, asked that he be recorded in the minutes as opposing the decision.

An appropriation of $100,000 for the Community Center Department will be needed because of the expansion of the use of schools at night for boxing, J. G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, warned the board in a letter.

School Demanded Now.

Expressing resentment against domination of municipal affairs by the Bureau of the Budget, the District of Columbia School Association last night demanded the Board of Commissioners advertise for bids and award contracts at once for the building of a new Anacostia Junior High School.

Deploring the decision of the director of the budget, who on November 25 forbade construction of the high school after Congress had appropriated $225,000 for it, the association adopted a resolution calling for restoration of the appropriated money and immediate action with the money now at hand.

It was pointed out that conditions in the old school are deplorable; that fire escapes are in a dangerous condition, rooms are overcrowded and facilities in general are limited.

On the plea of Mrs. Ruth W. Hoover, delegate from the Grant Parent-Teacher Association, the association moved to start a campaign for a new school to replace the U. S. Grant School, Twenty-second and G streets northwest.

Insufficient heating facilities causing the children much discomfort were cited as reasons for a new school.

Confronted with the fact that school children are compelled to stay away from school through lack of shoes and proper clothing the association referred the matter to a committee for immediate consideration.

Sculptor, Working Late at Night for a Year, Builds Model of Catholic University Shrine

Minute Details of Vast Structure Shown in Miniature.

Visitors Enabled to See Interior Features From Underneath.

For a year, painstakingly, far into the night, Joseph Anthony Atchison, sculptor, has worked on a remarkably detailed miniature model of the interior of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, which will display every intricate detail of the Romanesque-Byzantine basilica now in the course of construction on Catholic University campus. The shrine is to cost, eventually, many millions of dollars.

Holding his artist's palette, Atchison stands in front of the 20-foot model with its dome reaching six feet, seven inches from the base, which marks the present height of the completed crypt. Requiring the utmost patience, the work was entirely new to Atchison and each detail of structure presented an individual problem never met by him before.

The work is so constructed that visitors may enter by a passageway underneath, look up into the three chapels and see the inner structure of the completed cathedral.

Details Fascinating.

The details of the model, which include columns, stain glass windows, figures of saints, altar, chapels and galleries, are worked out with fascinating care. Most fragile parts like the rose window immediately above the entrance are interlined with wire. But the dome, with its understructure, was the hardest problem. It required an immense mold worked out to scale as are all the parts of the model.

Representing marbles from all parts of the world, the 40 columns, the 23 altars and the 19 chapels in the model were all cast from wax moulds. Spruce, sugarcane, wood, plaster, wax, celluloid, nails and mesh wire were the materials used.

The sculptor had to devise many details on the spot. Often he couldn't touch the model for days until inspiration came again.

Task Was Difficult.

"Making a model might seem a simple task," he said, "but nothing could be farther from the truth. Many problems seemed almost impossible. I nearly got gray hair. However, as the work grew, one avenue led into another and finally the problems were made clear."

Eventually all parts of the model will be painted in color with many mosaic themes. The model is on a scale of one-half inch to the foot.

Achison did the bust of the late Bishop Shahan, former rector of the university, the recumbent figure of the bishop directly over his tomb, and a pieta in memory of Mgr. McKenna's father and mother.

School Head Asks Recreational Aids

Employment for 40 recreational workers for the Community Center Department to expand the local leisure time program has been requested of the Civil Works Administration by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. Ballou requests that song leaders, game leaders, drama leaders, handicraft teachers, gymnasium attendants, dance leaders and accompanists be employed.

"White Collar" Workers Given CWA Chance

933 Are Added to Staffs of Four Government Branches.

Workers of the so-called white collar class were remembered by the Federal Government yesterday in its drive to employ 4,000,000 persons, when it was announced that 933 additional employes will go on pay rolls of civil works projects under four branches of Government service.

The workers will be obtained from local civil works administrations by Federal officials in various States and the District of Columbia.

Approval was given for Coast Guard projects designed to put to work 725 men and women. The Geological Survey received approval for employment of 90 engineers, clerks and stenographers.

The Library of Congress was authorized to employ 51 persons on a project for which there has long been a great demand. These workers will undertake to compile for the first time an index of portraits published in books and periodicals.

In the library of the Department of Agriculture 12 women will get jobs for the remainder of the winter, checking the 250,000 books in the department's files. These workers also will repair damaged book bindings.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics will employ 19 persons under allotments of civil works funds.

Thirty skilled workers will be employed by the Coast Guard in its Washington offices. A special job will be rehabilitation of files and records.

Other persons employed by the Coast Guard will be engaged in repairing buildings, grading and beautifying grounds, repairing roadways, clearing rights of way for telephone lines and repairing lines on Coast Guard reservations and rights of way in 18 States.

The water resources branch of the Geological Survey will employ in its district offices in 32 States and the District of Columbia and Hawaii 96 engineers and about 30 clerks and stenographers. Three engineers and one stenographer will be put to work here.

Wider Use of Bus Passes Approved

Transit Company Sells 24,869 at $1 in Week.

Wider use of the $1 weekly passes was approved by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday at the request of the Capital Transit Co., which reported a larger number of passes had been sold than had been expected.

The company reported sale of 24,869 of the $1 weekly passes and 3,490 of the $1.25 passes. Officers expect the weekly sales to increase rapidly to 40,000 or 45,000.

Under the new scheme the $1 passes will be good for unlimited rides on all bus lines of the company, on which a 7½-cent token fare is accepted. Under the first arrangement a 2-cent transfer charge was made between most of these bus and street car lines.

Shadow of Noose on Window Saves Life of Hungry War Ace

Police Force Entrance as Would-Be-Suicide Collapses.

Shadows of a noose outlined against a dingy window of a basement at 453 I street northwest, last night saved the life of Ernest DeVanie, World War flying ace, holder of the Croix de Guerre and Distinguished Flying and Service Cross.

Passers-by saw the shadow and called police. The door of the basement furnace room was battered open in time to see DeVanie, about to adjust the knotted rope around his neck, collapse on the floor. Police succeeded in reviving him and, learning he was famished, took him out and fed him.

Cracked up over the battlefields of France, in the St. Mihiel drive, shot down with a fractured skull, the hinges of his jaw shattered and the tip of his nose gone, the flying days of DeVanie are over. Daily for the last year he has gone from his mattress on the floor next to the furnace to seek work. An occasional window-washing job and a lawn to mow have been his only success. For the last two days he had not eaten, too weak to look for work or food.

Policeman J. P. Day, after seeing to it that the starving man was fed, provided him with meal tickets to last several days. Today DeVanie is to see Capt. Holmes about a job.

Perhaps what looked like twilight to First Lieut. Ernest DeVanie, of the 194th Aero Squadron, A. E. F., may be the dawn.

E. G. Walker Backed to Get Utilities Post

W. A. Roberts Leading in Race to Succeed Gen. Patrick.

President May Appoint New Officials This Week.

Appointment of Ernest G. Walker as a member of the District Public Utilities Commission has been proposed to President Roosevelt by several friends and admirers of Mr. Walker, whose name has not heretofore been widely mentioned.

Mr. Walker was given serious consideration by the President for appointment as District Commissioner. He has been active in local Democratic work and is widely known. He formerly was a newspaperman. For the last several years he has been engaged in looking after extensive real estate holdings.

William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel, who has been counsel of the commission, has been regarded as an outstanding candidate for the place made vacant by the retirement of Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick. William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, also has been mentioned for the place. Representatives of the utilities companies are said to have advanced the name of a "dark horse" and are pressing for his appointment.

President Roosevelt hopes to appoint the utilities commissioner and a new United States District Attorney this week, it was said at the White House yesterday. Pressure of other business, however, may prevent fulfillment of the President's hope.

Leo A. Rover, incumbent, has been anxious to get away for some time and engage in private practice of law and appointment probably would have been made before this except for the determined battle being waged by friends of various men for the place. Ralph A. Cusick has been urged on the President as one of the outstanding younger lawyers in the city by the local Democratic organization. Gossip has it that the choice lies between Mr. Cusick and Lucien H. Vandoren.

Mr. Vandoren is said to have the support of many of the older members of the District bar as well as of Assistant Attorney General Stanley, who has to do with Department of Justice patronage. Others mentioned include John P. Bramhall, Lansdale G. Sasscer, Maryland State Senators; Leslie C. Garnett, partner of C. C. Carlin, of Virginia, and Levi David.

Labor Dispute Still Delaying Postoffice Job

Conveyor System Held Up by Interunion Row Despite Ruling.

Although a decision by the National Labor Board ten days ago was expected to end the dispute, work has not yet begun on installation of the conveyor system in the city postoffice addition, it was learned yesterday. The job, which was scheduled to start several weeks ago, is being held up because of conflicting jurisdictional claims by millwrights, elevator constructors, carpenter and iron workers.

The labor board ruled that the contractor shall have the authority to allot or divide conveyor installation as he sees fit. The decision applied specifically to a similar dispute on the new Philadelphia postoffice, but the board recommended its acceptance on the Washington project.

A spokesman for the elevator constructors' union yesterday threatened a general strike if the work is given to millwrights. An official of the carpenters' union, with which millwrights are affiliated, predicted equally dire consequences if the installation is not awarded to millwrights.

The issue is between these two unions, iron workers being involved only by their support of the elevator constructors in the fight. All are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, but the carpenters do not belong to the building trades department.

Fort Myer Building Contract Awarded

The War Department yesterday announced award, according to the Associated Press, of the following contract under the public works program: Fort Myer, Edmond Pfotzer, Philadelphia, for one double noncommissioned officer quarters, $14,583.

Union Wages Called Unfair

Leader Charges Mechanics Get Less Than Pledged for U. S. Works.

Charges that union mechanics on several Federal building projects in Washington and vicinity are receiving wages below prescribed scales were made yesterday by Albert Caya, business agent for the carpenters' local here. On some of the public works jobs, he said, workmen have been brought from other cities in further violation of regulations.

At Highway Bridge, where fender systems are under repair, pile drivers have been brought in from other cities to work for 50 cents an hour, Caya declared, although the union scale is $1.12½. Some of the union carpenters employed at the Agriculture Department's experimental farm, under construction at Beltsville, Md., are receiving 20 cents an hour below the union's $1 scale, he said. This is a public works project.

The business agent said he would lay the complaints before the Board of Labor Review, which was formed to adjudicate wage controversies on PWA jobs.

Contractor Injured By Fall.

Fred A. Murgia, 38, bricklaying contractor, of 6512 Utah avenue northwest, was painfully injured last night when he fell from a ladder and down a flight of stairs while painting in his home.

Good morning! The one item of apparel that every man desires most and is least likely to buy for himself is a soft, comfortable, well tailored dressing gown. Remember that "well tailored" part when you buy one for Christmas. It has a great deal to do with the enjoyment of the robe. Remember that we have a complete file of sizes of thousands of Washington men.

Georgetown Quintet Swamps Western Maryland, 32-9, Before 2,500

Hilltop Five Hits Stride Near End

Hargaden Runs Up 15 Points in First Game of New Season.

O'Connor Is Impressive; Visitors Trail, 11-5, at Intermission.

A RIP VAN WINKLE Georgetown quintet brushed aside the cobwebs accumulated since last March, and with a rusty, wheeling motion defeated Western Maryland, 32-9, in the opening tiff of the basket ball campaign last night at Tech High School. A throng of 2,500 fans, one of the largest turnouts at a college game locally in several years, was on hand to welcome the new season.

Held well in check in the first half by its own errors and the visitors' stubborn defense, Georgetown swept through the second half like an uncontrollable grass fire to walk off with the decision. The Hoyas did not strike their real stride at any time, but there were moments in the second half when they displayed flashes of brilliancy, and it was then that Western Maryland faded out of the picture.

Hargaden Busy Man.

Ed Hargaden, second high scorer in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference last season, got off to a flying start with seven field goals and a foul for 15 points. The slim, freckle faced Irishman drew volleys of applause with a pair of neat follow-up shots that swished through the bucket from a side court angle. His feinting and passing also were of high order.

But Hagaden must share the individual honors with Jerry O'Connor former Gonzaga High School youth, who was shooed off the court by Coach Fred Mesmer last year when he first reported for practice. O'Connor dropped five double-deckers and a foul for second scoring honors, and played an excellent floor game.

Western Maryland lacked a scoring punch. It failed to register a field goal in the first half, which ended with Georgetown leading, 11-5, and got only two in the second. Frank Cumberland, former Central High School luminary, looked good at forward for the visitors, though he failed to score. Frank Draper, a graduate of Western High School, played a guard position for the Terrors.

Bucknell, Pitt Ahead.

Georgetown's showing was disappointing on the whole, and it will have to show a vast improvement if it expects to successfully hurdle Bucknell and Pittsburg, Friday and Saturday nights, its first opponents in the Conference.

In a preliminary game, Tech High School came from behind to down Georgetown Freshmen, 31-26.

Coach Rapped At Ohio State

Daily Attacks Willaman's Player Method.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 6 (AP).—Declaring the "usefulness" of Sam Willaman as head football coach at Ohio State University "is at an end," the Ohio State Lantern, campus daily, in an editorial today asked for his dismissal.

"Sam Willaman, we contend," the editorial said, "has proved himself lacking the first requisite of a coach; he can not handle players. The season has been marked by dissension on the team, resignations from the squad, petty jealousies between players and by a general want or respect for the coach.

Diplomacy Held Lacking.

"A big league coach would have a knowledge of fundamental football. We believe Sam Willaman has it. However, we maintain he lacks a certain type of leadership and diplomacy that are necessary, and peculiar to the position he holds.

"We thought that Willaman would realize before this that he should resign—which would have been the best solution to a difficult problem. Since he hasn't taken that step, there is the other alternative—dismissal."

Willaman said he had no comment to make on the editorial.

Awaiting Nibbles at Next Week's Chicago Trading Session —By Pierotti

Lions Don Togs And Resume Training

Coach Little Seeks Advice on Preparing Squad for Rose Bowl Game.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (AP).—Football togs Columbia thought were stowed away for the season until the Rose Bowl invitation came from Stanford were unpacked today and redistributed as the Lions went back into practice.

Coach Lou Little took his squad out to Baker Field for an hour or so of light exercise preliminary to getting down to regular football work. The boys broke training after their final victory over Syracuse two weeks ago.

Joe Ferrara, tackle and cocaptain-elect, came out with the squad because no notice of his ineligibility for failure to pass midterm examinations had been received at the athletic offce.

Richavich Eligible.

Announcement of his eligibility was made last night after it was learned Joe Richavich, tackle, star in his sophomore year, but ineligible all fall, had passed his mid-year's and could return to the squad. Ferrara may be allowed to take re-examinations.

Aside from the date of departure for California, set December 19, Little had no definite plans. He was in touch with Jesse Harper, director of athletics at Notre Dame; Bernie Bierman, who took a Tulane team to the coast; Jock Sutherland, of Pittsburgh, and Wallace Wade, who led Alabama to the Rose Bowl, seeking advice on the best methods of preparing the squad.

So far, suggestions have merely puzzled him. Some coaches who have made long trips to California for games believe the best results are obtained by training for several days in high altitudes and going into Pasadena for the first time on the day of the game.

Others, who met with success in California competition, worked their athletes on the game site for at least a week in order to acclimate them.

Knute Rockne believed that the simplest way to overcome the change in climate was to travel westward by easy stages, stopping longest at Tucson, Ariz., arriving in California perfectly acclimated the day of the game. Columbia probably will follow this plan.

4 More Stars Accept East-West Game Bid

San Francisco, Dec. 6 (AP).—Officials of the Shriners annual East-West charity football game to be played here New Year's Day announced today four more stars had accepted invitations to play with the Western team.

They are Ed Barton, Denver University guard; Phil Sarboe, Washington State quarterback; Carl Jorgensen, St. Mary's tackle, and Jay Tod, end on this year's San Francisco Olympic Club eleven.

Officials Fear Dundee Is Fat

Ordered to Boston Today to Weigh In for Bout.

BOSTON, Dec. 6 (AP).—Vince Dundee's delay in coming here to finish training for his middleweight title defense against Andy Callahan, of Lawrence, at the Boston Garden Friday night, today aroused official suspicions that the Baltimore Italian was having a little trouble getting down to the 160-pound limit.

As a result, Boxing Commissioner Dan Kelly ordered him to quit his Summit, N. J., training camp and present himself at the State House at 11 a. m. tomorrow for a thorough physical examination.

Delay Looks Suspicious.

"Dundee's delay looks suspicious," Kelly said. "We have not forgotten that he experienced some trouble getting down to the middleweight limit here several weeks ago when he won the title from Lou Brouillard. He will be weighed here tomorrow and, if he is over the limit, he will be ordered to resume training and take off the surplus. If he was permitted to wait for the official weighing-in ceremony, on Friday, it might be too late."

Callahan's normal poundage is far under the middleweight limit.

College Crowds Show 13% Increase

Gridmen Regain Half of Patronage Lost in Declines of 1931-32.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (AP).—Based on figures gathered by the Associated Press from all parts of the country and tabulated today, college football attendance for 1933 increased 13 per cent, as compared with the previous season, and appears to have recovered approximately half the business lost at the turnstiles during the 1931-32 decline.

This year's increase compares with a decline of 15 per cent in National attendance in 1932 and a drop of 10 per cent in 1931.

At the same time, reports from Eastern clubs in the National Professional Football League indicate increases in attendance this year ranging as high as 50 per cent. Figures for the entire circuit have not been made public but official sources today revealed the attendance for games in New York was doubled. Nearly as big increases were specified for Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia, where the advent of Sunday sport helped.

18,000 Average Attendance.

The average attendance for 13 professional football games played in the metropolitan area was 18,000 and equalled the average crowd for 29 college games played in the same district.

The cross-section of college attendance, on which the National figures are based, comes from the detailed reports of 46 institutions. Of these, 35 show increases, ranging as high as 100 per cent in the cases of Fordham, St. Mary's and Santa Clara, while only 11 show decreases for the 1933 season.

The aggregate attendance for the entire 46 colleges and universities was 7,026,408 as compared with a grand total of 6,109,015 for the previous season. This represents a gain of 917,393, or approximately 13 per cent.

563,000 Saw Trojans.

The biggest single attendance report comes from Southern California, with 563,000 for 10 games as compared with 475,000 for 9 games last season. In the Middle West, Notre Dame leads with 382,000, although this is a drop from 441,000 in 1932. Ohio State tops the Big Ten with 287,000. The Eastern leaders are Navy and Army, with 350,000 and 322,700, respectively.

Following is a comparison of the section figures for this year and last.

Boston U. Fires Grid Coach, Keeps Him as Athletic Head

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 6 (AP).—Boston University today announced that John H. Harmon, storm center of the latest of its numerous athletic upheavals, has been relieved as head football coach. He will continue as athletic director and, as such, will recommend his own successor.

Harmon, who also is coach of basket ball and baseball, took over the football job against his wishes at the urgent request of B. U.'s athletic council. Soon after the Terriers closed an unsuccessful season, Harmon was criticized for permitting an injured player to play in the final game against Tufts. Half way through the season, several of his outstanding players forced athletic officials to abandon the player-control system, pet hobby of Dean Frederick Rand Rogers, Harmon's immediate superior, by threatening to quit the team.

Dean Rogers said he and Harmon would attend the coaches' meeting in New York late this month and interview applicants.

Cronin, Here Awaiting Parley With Griffith, Hints of Deals

Nats' Pilot Secretive as to Trades But Admits Team May Be Bolstered at Chicago Meeting; Defends Goslin's Record.

JOE CRONIN, hustling young manager of the 1933 American League flag-winning Nats, but not showing much hustle as is his wont, due to four nights spent on a train from Californ-i-a, hove into Washington yesterday morning and, from force of habit, immediately hustled to the stadium. He had planned to hold a huddle with President Clark Griffith and discuss baseball plans for the coming season, but found that Griffith was finishing up a bridge holiday at the Blue Ridge Gun Club and so the two will hold no parley until today.

Joe evidently has learned Owner Griffith's song, written by the Nat boss following a successful pennant conquest in 1924, revived again the following fall, and now being popularized for the third time by the Washington Club president. It is entitled, "Don't Monkey With a Championship Team," and Joe immediately began singing this refrain yesterday.

No Need to Gamble.

"You know," he said, "we're facing a different condition this winter from that of last. Then, we had a third-place club that we wanted to strengthen enough to give us a pennant. Well, we gambled and did it. Now, all we want to do is to hold what we've got."

But a few minutes of conversation with the Nats' pilot leads one to believe there is no intention of standing pat. There is hardly a doubt but what Joe is planning on doing a little tinkering. Some time ago, President Griffith admitted that Cronin and he had been doing considerable corresponding and that he was bringing him all the way from California ahead of next week's major league meetings in Chicago so they could hold discussions. Add to that the fact that they are leaving a day early for the Windy City "so we can talk to the other club owners when they're not busy with meetings"—as Griffith explained.

Willing to Dicker.

But there has been no hint as to what the two have in mind with respect to deals. "Yeah, we'll do some trading if we can better ourselves," Cronin admitted yesterday, "but the other teams are trying to strengthen themselves, too, and it's a cinch they aren't going to give a first-place club anything any good."

And so it would seem that Cronin's main hope is to pick up some better utility talent than he now has. But the Nat leader would not even mention any particular second-string material that he has in mind. "There's no sense in tipping my hand," he said. "It might give the other clubs some ideas and kill our chances."

While Cronin admits that he'll trade Outfielder "Goose" Goslin or any other player if he can get what he considers better material in return, he took occasion to scoff at current reports that the "Wild Goose of the Potomac" is on the auction block.

Defends Goslin.

"I know the Goose only hit about .297, did not drive in as many runs as has been his custom, and fielded rather poorly in spots," Cronin said, "but he's still a mighty good ballplayer. He's got a knack of delivering in the pinches, and I remember many a game last season—even some in which he had looked bad in three or four times up—when he came through with a blow that moved a man from first to second or third and set the stage for us to rally and win out.

"It is no reflection on Goslin because I sometimes used Dave Harris for him against left-handed pitching, for Harris was rank poison to several rival southpaws, and it would have been poor judgment on my part not to try to get the best out of the material on hand. But, remember, Goose is always a threat at the plate; no pitcher ever 'lets down' when he is up there, and he's a mighty good man to have around. That trading talk about him is the bunk—unless, of course, I get what I think is more in exchange, and I'm not expecting that."

District Seeks Cup Net Bouts

Chevy Chase Would Again Stage Interzone Play.

ALTHOUGH the selection of a place will not be made until after the annual election and meeting of the Davis Cup committee, at Pittsburgh in February, indications are that Washington will be given serious consideration as a site for the staging of the Inter-American zone finals of the Davis Cup matches, scheduled for May 30, June 1 and 2.

The interzone finals have been held for the past five years on the courts of the Chevy Chase Club, home club of Lawrence A. Baker, association secretary, and member of the Davis Cup committee. Mr. Baker, who will attend a meeting of the executive committee this week-end, said he was not in a position to state just what action would be taken with respect to the choice of a place.

Ideal Battleground.

Chevy Chase has impressed Davis Cup officials as being an ideal battleground for the interzone finals that precede the challenge round on Wimbledon's historic courts.

Last season's Davis Cup matches between Argentina and America here did not prove a success financially, due to weather conditions. Rain ruined the attendance on the third day, and one of the matches, the singles between Wilmer Allison and Adriana Zappa, Argentine captain, was written into the books as unfinished.

Stanford Picked Easy Foe, Warner Declares

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 6 (AP).—In the opinion of Glenn "Pop" Warner, Stanford University picked an "easy opponent" for the Rose Bowl game when Columbia was chosen.

"There are at least eight better clubs in the East," said Warner. The Temple University mentor said Pittsburgh or Nebraska should have been chosen.

Bears, Giants Set Dec. 17 Play-off

Site of Contest for Title Yet to Be Decided.

New York, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The "world's championship" professional football game between the Chicago Bears and New York Giants wil be payed on Sunday, December 17, Joe F. Carr, president of the National Football League, announced today.

The site for the play-off game will not be known until after next Sunday's games and the final standings are determined. If the Giants finish with a higher standing in the Eastern division of the league than that of the Bears in the Western division, the game will be played in New York. If the result is a tie, a tossed coin will decide.

Play-off regulations call for a split similar to that of the baseball world series. The players' pool will get 60 per cent of the intake.

Grid Deaths Declined In 1933

26 Fatalities Directly Attributable to Fall Sport of U. S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (AP).—Despite increased participation by high school and sandlot players, deaths from football in the season just closed show a decline from the high marks of 1931 and 1932 in a survey made today by the Associated Press.

Reports from all sources show 26 deaths directly attributable to the game and 10 more in which injuries in play may have been a contributing factor. One of the deaths was that of a 13-year-old girl. These figures compare with 50 deaths recorded in 1931 and 38 last year.

Not one college varsity player is on the list and only five college freshmen, of which number only two can be listed as definitely having died from injuries received in supervised games or practice.

The deaths, including the 10 "doubtful" fatalities are segregated as follows: College, 5; high school, 16; sandlot, 13; semipro and athletic clubs, 2.

Game Safer Now.

The record leads Floyd R. Easterwood, of New York University, who conducted a similar survey for the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, to the conclusion that: "On the whole, the game appears to have been played more safely this year than ever before. New rules and newly devised safeguards for the players seem to be accomplishing their purpose."

Easterwood estimated there were approximately 1,100,000 students enrolled in American colleges this fall and nearly 5,000,00 in the high schools, a greater number than in 1932. The sandlot players "run into the millions."

"The game has taken hold as a popular general sport greater than ever before in history," he said.

The girl reported in the fatality list was 13-year-old Wilma Kelly, of Helena, Mont. While playing with a neighborhood group of children she fell and received a fractured nose, dying 14 days later of an infection growing out of her injury.

The two university players killed were Arthur Ehlers, of the University of Iowa, and Hoot Wilson, of Howard College, Birmingham, Ala. Both died of brain hemorrhages suffered while practicing with the freshmen team against the varsity.

Sukeforth Reinstated.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Commissioner K. M. Landis today announced the reinstatement of Catcher Clyde Sukeforth, of Brooklyn, who was on the ineligible list last season.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

THE gentlemen who comprise the Football Rules Committee have done their work well, it appears from today's statistics revealing a sharp revision downward in the seasonal deaths from football. Twenty-six deaths during the 1933 season are 26 too many, but vastly better than the 50 deaths of 1931 and the 38 fatalities of last year.

The Rules Committee was charged with the duty of revising the laws of the game to offer the fullest protection to the players and the results speak for themselves. Chief among the revisions was the ruling that a ball carrier is automatically down when any part of his anatomy except his hands or his feet touched the ground, and, apparently, it was a wise ruling.

College football players fired to a consuming enthusiasm by coaches in pre-game and between-the-halves pep sessions formerly took no chances on the fact that a player who stumbled or slipped would not get up and beat it for a touchdown and much unnecessary piling on resulted, with the defenseless ball carrier the target for berserk tacklers. The rule that rendered this roughing unnecessary eliminated a frequent source of danger.

All-American Suggestion.

With All-American teams being chosen by everybody and his grandmother until it is an insult for a football player not to be picked on somebody's All-American, there comes the suggestion that there is only one true test for the honor.

Frank Getty, who followed football up and down and across the country a few years back, makes the sage observation that the only players who should be conceded All-American ratings are those players who are able to make the National Professional League football teams. That ought to end all doubt, says Getty.

It has been long apparent that the lads in the little colleges have not been receiving their just dues from the All-American critics. A glance over the rosters of the Pro League teams is an eye-opener. For every recognized major college star on a pro team, there are two, sometimes three, fellows from the hinterlands who saw their names in headlines only in the college paper or alumni weekly.

"Daily Double" Installed.

Charles Town has installed the "daily double," the mutuel combination that was so popular at Southern and Midwestern tracks, and Washington racegoers are finding a new thrill in trying to pick the winners of two races selected by the track. All wagers on the "daily double" go into a separate pool and the pay-off is not dependent on the mutuels of the individual races. "Daily double" players make their own odds by the amount of money bet on the double ticket alone.

Leo Dandurand, owner of the Fairmount Track, tells of a harrowing experience when Fairmount first installed the "daily double." A big Westerner who held a winning "double" ticket on two long shots and received far less than a parlay would have netted him, stomped into the owner's office, threatened to shoot it up, charged everybody with being crooked and said nobody could understand the method of pay-off.

Two days later he came back to Dandurand's office, suffocating him with apologies. He had just cashed a "double ticket" on two even-money choices, received 20 to 1 in the "double" pool and had come back to tell Dandurand everything must be okay, although he couldn't understand why or how.

Giants' Hero Also Led in Shut-outs

Hung Up New Record of 46 Consecutive Scoreless Innings.

Dean Whiffed 17 Men in One Game to Break Old Mark of 16.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (AP).—Carl Hubbell, the slender southpaw from Oklahoma whose hurling played such an important part in the New York Giants' victories in the National League pennant race and in the World Series, turned up with another amazing feat today when the official 1933 National League pitching records were made public.

Pitching in 45 games, Hubbell allowed only 1.66 earned runs per nine-inning game. That mark was the lowest made in the league since 1916 when Grover C. Alexander led the league with a 1.55 average.

Hurled Most Innings.

Besides leading all the other hurlers in this index of effectiveness, Hubbell pitched the greatest number of innings of any hurler in the circuit, 309, won the greatest number of games, 23, led the circuit with ten shutouts and established a new league record for consecutive scoreless innings with 46 straight from July 13 to August 1. The former record was 44 in a row, established by Ed Ruelbach of the Cubs in 1908.

Hubbell also stood third in the league in the averages of games won and lost with 23 victories and 12 defeats for a .657 mark. Leading him were Lyle (Bud) Tinning of Chicago, who won 13 games and lost six for a .684 average, and lanky Ben Cantwell of Boston, who compiled a .667 average with 20 victories and 10 defeats.

Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, the loquacious righthander of the St. Louis Cardinals, made a new strikeout mark for one game by whiffing 17 of the Chicago Cubs. The old record of 16, the best since 1900, was held jointly by Frank Hahn of Cincinnati, Christy Mathewson of the Giants and Nap Rucker of Brooklyn. For the whole season, Dean had 199 strikeouts to lead the league for the second successive year. Dizzy took part in the greatest number of games, 48, and hurled 26 complete games to tie with Warneke for the lead in that respect.

Adolph Liska of the Phillies appeared in 45 games without pitching one complete game. The old mark of 44 was held by William E. Ehrhardt of Brooklyn. Liska also was the league's leading finisher, winding up 25 games.

Derringer Last.

On the wrong side of the picture, Paul Derringer of Cincinnati was the big loser with 27 defeats; Larry French of Pittsburgh, who faced 1,209 batsmen, allowed the greatest number of hits, 290, doing it for the third straight year; Leroy (Bud) Parmelee hit 14 batsmen and made 14 wild pitches; Bill Hallahan of St. Louis gave 98 walks; Walter Beck of Brooklyn yielded 128 runs and Tex Carleton of St. Louis allowed 104 earned runs.

Records of the leading ten pitchers on the basis of earned run averages, with their standings in won-and-lost averages, follow:

Carl O. Hubbell, New York	1.66	3
Lonnie Warneke, Chicago	2.01	12
Harold Schumacher, N. Y.	2.15	7

Hitting the Headpin . . .

CATHERINE FORTENEY, Rendezvous star, basked in the limelight in the week's rolling of the Ladies District League, pounding the maples for a new season's record with a game of 150, beating the record game of 148 turned in by Rena Levy last week. Mamie Payne (Meyer Davis), is a bowler of destiny. She scattered the maples for a high game of 140 and a set of 342, only to have her hopes of leading the league for just one week snatched by an extraordinarily high score.

No changes were made in the standings of the teams, all of the leaders sweeping their matches.

Evelyn Ellis annexed high individual set, gathering 351 pins. Rendezvous led the other team scores with a 579 game and 1,551 set.

Patrick (Dome Oil Company), carried away the individual honors in the Takoma Business Men's League at Takoma last night, rolling a 153 game and a 382 set, to assist in his team's clean sweep over the Columbia Wall Paper five. The winners had a 576 game and 1,655 set to annext team laurels.

In the other matches, Colorado Service Station took two from Old Colony Laundry, Adams-Burch Company won the odd game from Pioneer Press and Takoma Post Office took the edge from Stephens Warner Decorating Company, a new team in the league.

Reilly (Optomists) smashed the season's high game record for the Civics Club League at the Arcadia alleys, coming through with a huge 163 game. T. Kinnahan (Reciprocity) had high set with 367. Newcomer's 581 game and Optomists' 1,620 set were unsurpassed.

Led by Hokie Smith and Elbridge Mayo, the Bearcats tightened the race in the Recreation League at the Recreation drives. Both bowlers chipped in with a .352 set to bump the leaders for the odd game. Lou Freschi (Sol Herzog) threw in a 383 set, high for the night. Sims Music Studio, aided by a 584 team game, set the Quacks down with two losses. Howard Parsons' 371 set was instrumental in Kris Delicatessen's taking two from Printers. Bill Weaver chucked in a 363 set for Smysers Pharmacy, which took two from Patent Attorneys. Bearcats captured high total pinfall, gathering 1,708 maples.

Lorraine Gulli will strive to retain her 15-pin lead over Bess Hoffman in the second block of the Meyer Davis Sweepstakes at the King Pin drives tomorrow night.

The girls will be out with fire in their eyes and a determination to overtake the leader. Anything may happen before the final block is rolled at the Lucky Strike on December 15. Any one of the 15 entrants are liable to put on a hot hand in the race which isn't over until the final whistle blows.

Katherine Forteney, Rendezvous star, turned in a 150 game to lead both the men and the women for the highest league game rolled at the Convention Hall drives last night and, consequently, becomes the third person to receive a free entry in the Convention Hall branch of the Star Sweepstakes.

Norman Schroth (Marquette) and Werner (Salvidor) each rolled a 133 game to share the honors in the Knights of Columbus League at the Convention Hall. Schroth's 379 captured high set. San Domingo's 557 and Marquette's 1,607 were the best team scores.

Mohawks to Practice.

High and Prep Quintets List Frosh Tilts

Tech Schedules 11 Games; Eastern and Roosevelt Card Seven Each.

THAT the local high and prep schools make interesting basketball games for the local college freshman fives can best be attested by the fact that no less than 34 games are scheduled for this season.

Heading the group of District schools that have games scheduled with college frosh fives is McKinley Tech, with eleven encounters listed. The Mechanics have home-and-home battles with George Washington, Georgetown and Catholic University; and single settos carded with Virginia, Navy and Virginia Military Academy.

Eastern is slated to meet George Washington, and Catholic U. in home-and-home attractions, and Navy, Maryland and Georgetown in single tilts.

Seven for Roosevelt.

Roosevelt, like Eastern, but playing a much heavier schedule, also has arranged seven battles with college yearlings, playing George Washington and Catholic University, each twice, and Maryland, Georgetown and Washington-Lee in single engagements.

Western, with an extremely light slate, meets George Washington and Maryland in single encounters. Central has not announced its schedule as yet; but in all probability, it will include a goodly number of games with local college fives.

In the prep school division Emerson will play three college outfits in Maryland, Washington-Lee and George Washington; Gonzaga has a pair of tilts lined up with George Washington, while Georgetown Prep has two games with Georgetown University.

Will Play One Each.

St. Alban's and Friends each plays a single college fresh team, meeting the American Jayvees and George Washington, respectively.

Looking at the schedules from the college side of the fence, George Washington lists eleven preparatory and high school games in the District and Georgetown and Catholic University, six each. Maryland has lined up four games; Navy and Washington-Lee, two; and Virginia, Virginia Military and American, one.

The local high-prep basket ball schedule today finds Roosevelt stacking up against Mount Rainier, there; and Georgetown Prep clashing with Charlotte Hall, of Baltimore, at Garrett Park. Incidentally, the Ruf Riders defeated Kendall School yesterday, 29 to 24, while the Hoyettes had to postpone their season's inaugural until today. Rockville (Md.) was unable to get a team together to meet the Preppers yesterday.

Emerson Institute will clash with St. John's today on the Cadets' court. Incidentally, the game between the institute and Saranac A. C., originally scheduled for tonight, was vetoed by the faculty committee.

Primo Carnera Sails For Brief Stay in U. S.

Genoa, Italy, Dec. 6 (AP).—Primo Carnera, world's heavyweight boxing champion, today sailed unexpectedly for New York on the Conte di Savoia.

He said it was a business trip and that he would return on the same liner after only a day or two in New York City. He was unaccompanied.

Central Y Swimmers Meet G. W. B. Squad

Victorious in two meets this season, Central Y. M. C. A. swimmers will engage the George Washington "B" squad in the "Y" tank tomorrow night, starting at 8:15 o'clock.

Boggs, Marmion, Moncure, Capt. Mullady, McCormick, Marshall, Orme, Rawls, Rait, Rouse, Becker, Crandall, Wilson and Harding will swim for the "Y" team, while Kelley, Vartia, Graves, Catchings, Dorman, Hayes, Browning, Porter, Alford, Manchester, Hess.

Coach Dallas Shirley has been drilling his "Y" charges nightly in an effort to chalk up a third straight victory.

Roosevelt Five Beats Kendall by 29-24 Count

Roosevelt defeated Kendall School yesterday on the Rough Riders court, 29-24.

Jimmy Cavanaugh and George Beamer led the assault on the invading Greenies. The game marks the third victory in four starts for the Riders, who lost the opener of the season last week to the strong Emerson Institute five, 47-22.

Death of Prohibition Revives "19th Hole" at Nearby Courses

THE death of prohibition came as glad news to golfers affiliated with clubs situated in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, and means the revival of the famous "19th hole," that part of the golf course known as the bar room.

Virtually every club in the two counties was equipped to handle a copious supply of sparkling liquors, and needs only its license before serving a dash of this and a dash of that to members over the bar.

Congressional Country Club, Columbia, Chevy Chase, Manor, Woodmont, Kenwood and Indian Spring are located in Montgomery County, and Beaver Dam is the lone golf club in Prince Georges. Indications are that the bar rooms will be going at full blast before the end of this week.

Club members are expected to celebrate the return of liquor with fitting ceremonies.

Bows to Kelly for First Title Tourney Loss in 3 Years, 125-85.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6 (AP).—Ralph Greenleaf, New York, world's pocket billiard champion, was defeated here tonight for the first time in three years' championship play by George Kelly, of Philadelphia, 125 to 85 in 25 innings.

A 19-year-old Philadelphia star, William Mosconi, handed the world championship pocket billiard tournament a thrill and an upset today by defeating the veteran Bennie Allen, of Kansas City, 125 to 31, in ten rapid-fire innings. So great was Mosconi's mastery that he had only three scoreless innings, and piled up a high run of 37. It was the shortest match of the tournament thus far.

In a battle of veterans, Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., holder of the title seven times in 20 years of play, won his first start in the championship drive by turning back Charles Seaback, of Astoria, N. Y., 125 to 90, in 23 innings. Seaback had a high run of 64, to 26 for his conqueror, but had 16 scoreless innings to Taberski's 13.

Millers Beat Stewarts In Community Feature

Miller Furniture Co. defeated Stewarts Pharmacy, 23 to 15, in the main attraction last night at Hines Junior High School in the Southeast Community Center Basket Ball League. Anacostia Business Men won from their greatest rivals, Congress Heights, 28 to 16, while Certified Bakers defeated Easton A. C., 26 to 11.

The Miller-Stewarts contest was hard fought, the Stewarts missing enough pot shots to win any ordinary game. The first half ended 7 to 7.

Evans, lanky center for the Bakers, scored eight goals from the field, leading the players in the three games. Jimmy Davis and Holland for Anacostia were the lads that put the skids under Congress Heights.

Marion A. C. will play Saint Josephs Boys' Club at 7 tonight in a class A, league contest.

One Night in the Bar Rooms

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (Spl.).—While this does not exactly come under the head of sports, this department went down to the village last night after locking up shop to see how the natives would take the first night of repeal and is willing to write out a brief report for our clients in other cities on how they took it in our town. They did some very funny things here in the morning papers, such as printing pictures of a lot of guys, apparently all named Joe, having themselves a drink, but then that is none of my business. However, it was the first time I ever saw flash bombs going off in the town's best speak without the house tough guys descending on the cameramen, so I guess that was news all right.

Went to Bill Lahiff's tavern for dinner, which same is one of the colorful and historic restaurants of the modern era and will replace places like the old Jack's and Bustanoby's. It is located in West Forty-eighth street just off the main stem; the sports mob goes there to eat, the prize fighters and ball players and politicians and the promoters. You could always find Jim Farley, now head postmaster, there on fight nights, and Dempsey, and Canzoneri, and Jimmy Johnston and Tom Meighan, Winchell and Ted Husing and Bill Terry, when he was in town, and all that crew.

The place was jammed, but I didn't see any athletes or celebrities. Conversation and laughter and atmosphere was pitched three keys higher. You could feel that as soon as you came in. There was a feeling of lift and gayety in the place. Got a table with Spooner, one of the most famous waiters on Broadway.

Everybody wants to sit at Spooner's tables in the tavern because he insults all the guests and does it with infinite skill and charm. Spooner will always pass friendly and favorable criticism on your girl friend if she happens to be a looker, ask you what the hell you mean by coming in there without a shave, says "What'll it be?" and then brings you what he wants to, anyway.

He presented a full wine list of domestic and French still and sparkling wines and a nice selection of Rhine wines. He eyed me malevolently while I was making a selection, a Neirsteiner, 1923, or something like that and then said, "You only wasting your time. We've only got four of them in, Pol Roger, a Chablis, some red cap and that St. Julien, so make up your mind." I had my palate all set for a Rhine wine and squawked, but Spooner said, "You'll take what we've got and like it. What'll it be, that red stuff? I'm selling a lot of that. I wouldn't drink it myself."

Spooner finally consented to ferry in a pint of Pol Roger. The other tables were evenly divided between champagne and sparkling Burgundy. Champagne, mostly off-year vintages, all over our town was four bucks a pint.

Broadway in the upper forties was quiet and full of sober rubbernecks. I didn't see a soul between Forty-eighth and Fifty-second streets who looked as if he or she had had a drink.

There was an open bar next to the Rivoli Theater doing a big business with people standing up and drinking—beer and cheaper wines. But the crowd outside peering in was bigger than that inside drinking. The sightseers craned their necks and stood on tiptoes. The cops had nothing to do and stood with their hands tucked into their great coats and looked bored.

The St. Regis was jammed. Babe Ruth and his wife were there for a while. The foyer of the most famous speakeasy in New York on West Fifty-second street was cluttered up with cases of whisky stacked to the ceiling. To get in you still had to be scrutinized through the iron grill. The key to the outer door was turned. You entered the space between the inner and outer door. The outer door was then locked and the inner one unlocked. Necessary precautions, no doubt. The cops had been ordered to clean out the speaks.

But those cases stacked on the floor? The first legal shipment. And then discovery. The place was now a regularly licensed restaurant, legal and respectable. The ceremony at the door merely lent it that homey touch. You can not break the habits of years in a night.

The town's swankiest supper club, in East Sixty-first street, had closed its doors because not another person could be accommodated on its three floors. Here, too, the liquor prices were down, but they had slapped on a $2 per person cover charge. And no floor show. The two smackers just to get in. Full dress was the rule. Drunks were the exception. The place was legally licensed as a club. But the bar was deserted. Suddenly law-abiding, the management would not serve standees.

Times Square got itself cluttered up a little with peasantry there for a while, but they were merely sightseers. There was no public hilarity, no dancing in the streets. I thought our town took it very quietly and gracefully. How was it in your town?

Six Out of 100 Applicants In Running for Kentucky Job

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 6 (AP).—The University of Kentucky Athletic Council, after interviewing applicants for the position of head football coach, to be relinquished by Harry Gamage, announced tonight that no selection had been made.

Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, chairman of the council, said: "We have reduced the number of candidates from nearly 100 to about a half dozen. It's a horse race between these men."

Among those interviewed were John McEwen, former Army coach, who now coaches the Brooklyn Dodgers professional football team; Chet Wynne, head coach at Auburn, and John "Shipwreck" Kelly, co-owner of the Dodgers, who is not an applicant for the position, but appeared in behalf of McEwen.

Others under consideration are Paul Jenkins, Kentucky alumnus, who coaches Ashland High School, Elmer Layden, Duquesne coach; Josh Cody, Vanderbilt line coach, and W. T. Van De Graf, Colorado College.

Up until today Maj. Ralph Sasse, former coach of the United States Military Academy, was one of the prominent candidates for the coaching position at the university, but he withdrew his application in a letter to Dr. Funkhouser.

While the council did not express its opinion as a group as to which man it favored the most for the head coaching job, it is believed that the final selection rests between Layden and Wynne. Both were stars at Notre Dame, and each has established an enviable record as a coach.

C. U. Courtmen Unimpressive To Coach

Cotton Is Worried Over Progress as Duke Contest Nears.

HEADACHES, Bromo-Seltzers and a corps of basket ball players who refuse to function as a well-drilled team should function, comprise the miniature world that Forrest Cotton, Catholic U.'s basket ball coach, exists in as the Cards prepare for a strenuous campaign on the boards. Duke will be in town next week, and one of the first items on the Blue Devils' itinerary is a game with C. U. That's what Cotton's worried about.

Perhaps the astute Cotton is a trifle too severe with his men. It is less than a week since practice was inaugurated and only Monday was the real grind started. Add to this a slippery floor that would defy the efforts of a tight-rope artist to remain upright, and you have a few good reasons why C. U. right now is not the best team in the country.

To Remedy Floor Situation.

The floor situation will be remedied within the next few days with the aid of water and a grease remover, which one of the leading garages recommended for the job. And unless the players show better results, Cotton may apply the same treatment to them.

Duke has a veteran combination, including the brothers Thompson, Herb and Jim, of Washington. Jim was named on the second All-Southern Conference quintet last season, though naturally a center. Phil Weaver, a guard, and Sam Bell, Herb's running mate at forward, are the other holdovers from last season's team.

Connie Mack, jr., son of the gaunt Philadelphia baseball pilot; Huiscamp, Kunkle, and Wright, up from the freshman five of a year ago, give the Blue Devils a well-balanced squad, one that will wreck havoc in the spacious Brookland gym December 14, unless C. U. shows a decided form reversal.

Coach Eddie Cameron's 1932 team was runner-up in the Southern Conference tournament, losing out to South Carolina for the title in an unpleasantly close finale. This year they are favored to cop the bunting.

Berger, D. C., Likely Virginia Grid Captain

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 6 (Spl.).—Spencer Berger, of Flint, Mich., probably will be elected captain of Virginia's football eleven for 1934 at the annual team banquet, to be held later this week at the Farmington Country Club.

Berger, who played at fullback during the past season, attended Central High School, Washington, before coming to Virginia.

Thomas J. Laffey, jr., of Wilmington, Del., has been elected manager of varsity football for 1934, and Donald Q. Taylor, of Baltimore, Md., manager of first-year football.

Gales Booters Bow, 6-1, to Park View

Winners Always Lead in Playground Championship Tourney.

PARK VIEW yesterday eliminated Gales in the second game of the Municipal Playground Department championship for elementary schools, the final score being 6-1.

The winners had the advantage of a strong breeze in the opening half, but it was the fine combination shown by their forwards that was mainly responsible for the half-time lead of 4-0, Gales seldom threatening in this period. Lynard shot the first point four minutes after the start, followed three minutes by another goal from the toe of Gianiny.

Gales Escapes Whitewash.

Gales reduced the leeway soon after opening the second half, but could not again get past Rudden, who was ably assisted by both fullbacks when under pressure. Park View's fifth goal came from penalty, for handling by Musolino near goal, and Lynard's try was unsavable.

Miller, D. Rudden, Francisco and Ehrlich were always prominent for Park View; T. Bonanno, Schubridge, De Angeles and Stewart being best of the Gales' representatives.

Women Golfers Today Reelect Miss Harris

Miss Elizabeth C. Harris, well-known Washington attorney, will be reelected as president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association at its annual meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Miss Harris succeeded Mrs. Frank R. Keefer as president last December. Her name was brought in with the slate of officers by the nominating committee early last month. Nomination is tantamount to election.

Others who are up for election are Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, who will succeed Mrs. Norman B. Frost, of Columbia, as first vice president; Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, of Woodmont, successor to Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, as first vice president; Mrs. Richard N. Sutton, Washington Golf and Country Club, to succeed herself, as secretary, and Mrs. C. K. Wing, of Army and Navy Club, to succeed Mrs. Alma Von Steinner, as treasurer.

Overlin and Jacobs In Fights Tomorrow

Ken Overlin, of Norfolk, winner of his last sixteen fights, will meet Rudy Marshall for the middleweight championship of the National Guard in a 10-round bout at the 106th Infantry in New York tomorrow.

Stumpy Jacobs, a stablemate of Overlin's, boxes Bucky Taylor, of Baltimore, in an 8-round bout at Norfolk tomorrow, and Pete Nebo over the same distance in Atlantic City December 18.

High School Highlights.

FIFTEEN men answered the first call for basket ball tryouts at Woodward Prep yesterday afternoon, no less than eleven of whom were members of this season's football team. According to George Stansfield, student publicity manager, the following reported yesterday: Charley Jones, Snowden Custis, Dave Humphrey, Joe Simpson, Jack Call, Boots Huff, Eddie Fedner, Alex Stadtler, Paul Schaub, Fred Blankenship, Junie Rozelle, Jack Edwards, Dick Kohler, Paul Botsford and Ernie Gruff.

Coach Hayes is busy rounding out an impressive schedule for his team and will be ready for announcement in a week or ten days.

Joe Gardner, athletic director at Georgetown Prep, states that his game at Rockville (Md), High School probably will be canceled, leaving the Thursday, February 8, date open. No doubt he will be glad to fill it with a local prep or high school outfit. Write him at Garrett Park, Md.

Only five of Emerson's court games will be played at home. These attractions will be played in the Washington Boys' Club cage.

Although White Plains (N. Y.) High School is anxious for Central to return to New York for a Thanksgiving grid game again next year, Bert Coggins has all but closed arrangements with another out-of-town eleven for next year's turkey day game.

Mike Kelly's Eastern basketeers received another jolt in the form of an injury when Dickie Fitzgerald, "vest-pocket" regular guard, suffered a severe knee injury which will keep him out of the line-up for at least three weeks. Two weeks ago, Tom Davis, star center of the Lincoln Park five, suffered a chipped ankle which will keep him on the sidelines until after the holidays.

Two temporary casualties amid the basketball coaching ranks of the District public high schools are Bert Coggins, Central coach, who was confined to his home yesterday with an ulcerated throat, and Mike Kelly, Eastern mentor, who has been forced to remain away from his court duties by order of the attending surgeon who removed his tonsils yesterday.

Zipalong Leads From Start to Defeat Juveniles in Charles Town Feature Race

Choice Beats Blue Foam 4 Lengths

Prize Package Is Third; Miss Morocco Wins Distance Race.

By Walter Haight,
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 6. This cloudy, damp day in the mountains might have been a field day for Mrs. John Hay Whitney, popular sportswoman of Virginia and points North. The Shenandoah Jockey Club named the feature race, the Llangolen, after Mrs. Whitney's farm on the other side of those thar Blue Ridge Mountains. She retaliated by naming Blue Foam to uphold the prestige of her stable in the 6½ furlong contest.

But along came Zipalong and the picture was spoiled. In fact, Zipalong began zipping from the moment Starter Cassidy was satisfied with the alignment of the field of six juveniles. The son of Whiskalong was ridden by Jockey Windle and he did not have to sing "Zipalong little dogie, Zipalong." The youthful horse evidently knew he was out there on the heavy track to go places and places he went. Prize Package chased him around the first turn and then up the back stretch with Blue Foam, her gray tail straightened out, running third.

Blue Foam Tries.

Zipalong drew away in the stretch as Blue Foam made a game, but futile, bid. At the wire, the Whitney representative was four lengths behind, barely beating out Prize Package for second money. Zipalong, a Ziegler color bearer, was the favorite at a $5.20 mutuel.

The crowd was the best since opening day despite the inclement weather, the first that the track has encountered.

The Washington combination of Trainer Burch and Jockey Cruz registered its daily victory in the fifth race and the triumph was the second of the meeting for Miss Morocco, a daughter of Stimulus. She sprinted to take her first purse and today shifted to a distance to lead all the way. Tuffy G, closer than usual, made a race of it, however, and was closing in on Miss Morocco at the finish. Grand Acre, owned by the Washington Goodacres, was third.

Sun Dora, a little filly owned by L. J. Collins and operated by A. Miller, exhibited much hoof slinging to take the first race from a band of 10 juveniles over the five-furlong course. In fact, she bounded to the front in the first three hops and stayed there throughout the running. Forceful and Biff did a lot of battling, just behind the ultimate winner. Forceful took the place position. Decorate came up to nudge Biff out of the show money. Sun Dora was no secret and paid a $4.80 mutuel.

The second race was between two horses, Energetic Boy, which proved the winner, and Eyota, which occupied the top spot for most of the six and a half furlongs. It was in the closing strides that McLaren brought the son of Stimulus up to take the decision by a nose. The pay off was a mere $4.20.

Silverdale is Winner.

As often happens, the big bad wolf that delays the start often gets the best of the break. It was this way with Silverdale, owned by Martin Finn, a Washingtonian. The former stake horse did everything but get in the line-up for more than seven minutes. However, when the important running began he was Johnny on the spot. He jumped out in front of Oral and there was no catching him. Dabson rode the veteran son of The Porter, to win by a head from Oral. Three lenghts away came Chatterfol. The last named and Water Lad were practically left at the post. Silverdale paid a substantial $11.20 mutuel.

Silverdale teamed with Sun Dora to provide the daily double players with a $49.90 pay-off.

Electric Gaff charged out on top of his field in the sixth race and, for betting purposes, the mile and a sixteenth trip was over. Knapp rated him well and he was home two lengths ahead of Hot Cake and three lengths in front of Old Field.

Young John, trained by a Japanese, one H. S. Takera, won the finale from Fair Crest and Sisko. The winner paid $39.40..

The marine worm (Autolytus cornutus) reproduces in a manner known as "alternation of generations." That is to say, every other generation is sexless—the sexless individuals producing sexual individuals, and vice versa.

In the sexual generation the female lays eggs which hatch into sexless individuals. These in turn multiply by budding. In this strange method of reproduction a second head sprouts on the tail, this head grows a new tail, another head sprouts on that tail—and so on for as long as the first one lives. Sometimes a chain of 40 worms fastened head to tail may be observed. In other cases they break off as fast as they grow. The worms of this generation, however, are male and female. Thus the cycle begins anew.

Although he had survived 100 ring battles without injury, and had faced death and injury thousands of times during his ten years as a steeplejack, Otto O'Keefe, of Philadelphia, suffered his greatest injury while he was doing nothing more than timing a boxing match. He was standing upright, then turned to take a step and, without falling, stumbling, or being hit, he broke his leg. Even O'Keefe does not know how it happened.

Foreign Play's Jeff Park Win Surprises

JEFFERSON PARK, Dec. 6 (AP). Foreign Play, a 4-year-old daughter of the famous French horse Epinard, ran right back to her recent good race to win the fourth event at the surprisingly good odds of $33.60 for $2 here this afternoon. With the sun popping out from behind the clouds at intervals and the racing trip slow from overnight rain, the 6 furlongs distance was covered in the good time of 1:13 2-5.

Foreign Play, representing W. C. Weant, held a length advantage over the heavily backed Sister Zoe at the end. Flo M. was third, less than two lengths behind.

Rushes to Front.

Jockey Petrella swung Foreign Play into instant command and allowed the filly to open up Daylight before taking her under wraps. Flo M. was unable to make up ground, while forcing the pace and gave way to Sister Zoe entering the final furlong. The favorite was hard ridden but Foreign Play had plenty left as she passed the pagoda pole.

Betty Farrell, $4.40 favorite, hung up her second straight at the meeting when she easily outsprinted eleven other platers in the third dash. Camp Boss, running in suddenly improved form, forced all the pace and was beaten two lengths. Prince Plato held the show position from the start and finished another span away. Eddie Arcaro, who also won the second event at long odds, had merely to sit still and let Betty Farrell run in order to earn a double, the former Bradley filly never being in danger.

Chevigny Is Reported Chosen Texas Coach

Austin, Tex., Dec. 6 (AP).—Football fans were passing the word here today that Jack Chevigny, coach at St. Edward's University, Austin, and protege of the late Knute Rockne, would succeed Clyde Littlefield as head football coach at the University of Texas.

Neither Chevigny nor Dr. W. E. Metzenthin, chairman of the university athletic council, could be reached for statements. Reports were that the council elected Chevigny last night, after Littlefield had resigned.

Chevigny developed a winning team at St. Edward's, his eleven losing only one conference game.

Dear Jack:

Stocks Retreat Fraction After Tuesday Gain

Narrow Changes Recorded as Sales Drop to 1,443,743 Shares.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—After their splurge of the previous session, stocks reverted to hesitancy today, backing and filling in a compartively narrow range.

The net change for the averages was a small decline, although for the market as a whole advances and recessions were fairly evenly distributed. Transactions totaled 1,443,743 shares compared with around 2,000,000 yesterday.

Dollar exchange rallied as the gold price remained unchanged at $34.01 for the fifth consecutive day. Wheat rose about a cent, then yielded its betterment. Minor commodities were largely lower, but moderately so.

Still Open to Conjecture.

Official purposes regarding the dollar were still the subject of conjecture, but many in Wall street remarked that the investment market has been willing to pick up during recent intervals of steadiness in the Treasury gold price.

Whether a minimum of disturbance to exchanges was desired, at least pending completion of the Government financing, was not disclosed, but some financial observers thought things pointed in that direction.

On the Stock Exchange, rails did well and succeeded in holding part of their gains, which was more than could be said for other groups. Declaration of a $3 dividend by the Burlington, following closely Santa Fe's action on its preferred, seemed to attract boosters for the carrier shares. Great Northern and Northern Pacific, which benefit by the Burlington's payment to the extent of around $2,500,000 each, rose a point or more and at the best there were similar gains for many other rail leaders. Santa Fe's senior issue rose 4⅜.

Profit-Taking Develops.

Generally, the market met profit-taking, but leaders were well supported on the way down. U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, Case, General Electric, Sears Roebuck and Westinghouse lost fractions to a point net.

American Telephone's decline was nearly 2, and U. S. Smelting's slightly more. Alcohols acted a bit weary, but kept their losses small. U. S. Tobacco jumped 6 points on news of the $5 extra dividend. Johns-Manville and American Radiator, in active trading, again reflected expectations of building expansion.

Sterling sagged several cents in terms of the dollar and francs also worked lower after early resistance. Some foreign exchange quarters are talking about a $5 pound rate as a likely goal, though there have been no official intimations to substantiate that figure. Nevertheless, the pound has shown a rather distinct reluctance to go much above $5.20, which may or may not be significant.

The day's budget of trade and industrial news included the weekly comments of Iron Age on steel matters. This review reported a "growing feeling of confidence," calling particular attention to recent rail and track material orders.

CWA Outbids Employers

Relief Work More Attractive Than NRA Minimum Code Wages

By Ralph West Robey.

In spite of the wide attention the Civil Works Administration recently has received there is one important aspect of it that has gone almost untouched. This is the question of the rate of pay for this work. Specifically this rate is 40, 45 and 50 cents an hour, depending upon the locality. To appreciate the significance of this, however, it is well first to recall one or two other points.

The first of these is that this C. W. A. is straight relief. This can not be over-emphasized. C. W. A. projects are not a part of the great public works program of the Federal Government. Neither are they a part of the immense mass of so-called self-liquidating projects which have been undertaken. Rather they consist of work that would not be done except as a means for giving relief to the unemployed.

There are, of course, some exceptions to these general statements. Doubtlessly at some points the C. W. A. funds are being used as a substitute for P. W. A. grants and loans. These, however, distinctly are uncommon. The general rule is for the C. W. A. work to consist of those activities for which Government funds are not available under the P. W. A.

CWA Are the American Form of a Work Dole.

Basically, therefore, payments made through the CWA are nothing more nor less than doles, with the provision that in order to be eligible one must make a semblance of doing some work under the supervision of the proper Government authorities. The work may consist of sweeping up leaves, grading a park, making a playground, or any of the other thousand and one things that a community likes to have done but usually thinks can be put off without serious harm.

The second point worthy of recalling preparatory to appraising this dole is the fact that under the NRA there recently has been an overhauling of the American wage scale. In each of the codes a minimum wage has been established. Such minima have varied from industry to industry and even geographicaly within the same industry, but in each instance the Government has established a figure which must be met.

In connection with these minimum wage requirements two main arguments have been used. The first is that this minimum wage will provide a living standard for our employes. Secondly, that it will help lift us out of the depression by causing more purchasing power to be paid out through these higher wages.

Provides a Basis for Appraising CWA Wages.

Unless the NRA authorities have been guilty of misrepresentation, therefore, we may conclude two things about the minimum wages that have been established by the codes. The first of these is that the wage set will provide a reasonable livelihood, all things considered. Secondly, that these minima on the average represent an increase above what the employed were getting before the NRA.

Now with this background look at the rate of pay in the CWA. As stated above the minimum is 40, 45 and 50 cents a hour, depending upon the locality. The specific question, then, is how this dole compares with the minima established in the codes, for certainly if these minima are sufficient for men engaged in productive work it should be enough for those on a dole.

One finds, however, that the minimum rates under the CWA exceed the minimum rates provided in the code for every major industry. We have established a dole, in other words, which affords a higher standard of living than our regular employes enjoy.

Needless to say it is the most luxurious dole that any nation ever had. It is a dole that outbids private employers. It is incredible.

Bank Stocks Hold Firm During Week

New York Dec. 6.—The New York City bank stock market held firm during the past week, closing slightly above the levels of the previous week. The aggregate market value of the sixteen leading issues as compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, was $1,146,169,000 as of December 1, compared with $1,142,400,000 at the close on November 24, an increase of $3,769,000, or 0.33 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 stocks of 6.84 per cent compares with a yield of 6.86 per cent reported on November 24. The current market value of the sixteen stocks is now 0.84 times their known book value, unchanged for the week.

Based upon current figures, the 16 stocks are now quoted at an average of 9.9 times their known earnings, also unchanged from the close of the previous week.

Chicago Egg Futures.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Egg futures, refrigerator standards, December, 14⅞; January, 15¾; Fresh graded firsts, February, 15¾. Butter futures, storage standards, December, 16¾; January, 17; February, 17⅛.

Power Production Declines in Week

New York, Dec 6 (AP).—Electric power output last week amounted to 1,553,744,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,607,546,000 in the previous week and 1,510,337,000 in the like period last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. The drop from the previous week was partly accounted for by the Thanksgiving holiday.

Because of the holiday factor the institute's comparison covered the two weeks ended December 2, the combined outturn for this period being 5.9 per cent above that of the corresponding time in 1932. For the week ended November 18 the gain over 1932 was 5.6 per cent.

In New England the gain over 1932 was 6.8 per cent against 8.4 per cent in the previous week; Middle Atlantic, up 3 against 4.6; Central industrial, up 8.9 against 8.71; West Central, up 0.5 against 1.9; Southern States, off 0.4 against a decline of 3.9; Rocky Mountain, up 30.3 against 26.6; Pacific Coast, up 4.7 against 3.0.

Bonds Climb As Corporate Issues Lead

Prime Loans Affected by Dollar; Sales Up to $13,031,000.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Corporation loans, led by rails, moved up briskly in today's bond market while United States Government securities sagged moderately.

The trading volume was a little above that of yesterday, sales totaling $13,031,000. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced one-half point.

Prime investment maturities apparently reflected the currency stabilization implications in the unchanged domestic gold rate of $34.01. The firmness of the dollar against foreign exchanges, especially sterling, was also cheering to holders of high grade mortgages.

Federal Loan Losses.

While Federal loans recorded losses of 1-32 to 20-32 of a point, the activity in this group was small. The hesitancy in the Governments was attributed principally to uncertainty regarding the Treasury's December 15 financing terms which were expected to be announced momentarily.

Payment of a $3 dividend by the Burlington, the first since June of last year, aided sentiment for the transportation division.

Carrier gainers of fractions to 3 or more points included some loans of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, Central Pacific, Burlington, Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Cleveland Union Terminal, Colorado & Southern, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, K. C. Southern, Louisville & Nashville, M.-K.-T., New York Central, Nickel Plate, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, Union Pacific, Wabash, Virginia Midland and Western Maryland.

Among Better Bonds.

Among the better utilities and industrials were bonds of American Telephone, American Metal, American Smelting, Bush Terminal, Childs Co., Consolidated Gas, Detroit Edison, International Telephone, Kresge Foundation, National Steel, North American Edison, Portland General Electric, Remington Rand and Western Union.

Foreign obligations were mixed. Issues of Argentina, Denmark, Berlin and United Steel Works gained 1 to 2 or more points. Loans of United Kingdom eased, as did those of Dutch East Indies and French 7½s.

French Government 7s, however, advanced 1½ points.

The Farm Credit Administration yesterday placed the November total at more than twice that of October, when only $28,091,726 was loaned.

Last month's figure included $20,744,755 in loans from the land bank commissioner's fund of $200,000,000 for refinancing farm indebtedness, usually on the security of second mortgages on farms.

Regional Loans.

Regional agricultural credit corporations increased their loans by about $5,000,000 during November, most of them being emergency loans, and brought the total outstanding on November 30 to $142,504,048.

Demand for credit through the Federal intermediate credit banks continued during November, with loans and discounts totaling $39,588,219 bringing the total of loans outstanding by the credit banks on November 30 to $136,861,440.

This total included loans and discounts for the regional agricultural credit corporations and production credit associations.

Crop Loans Decline.

Crop production loans declined materially from the October total of $373,601 to $146,775 last month. The total of outstanding loans by crop production loan offices on November 30 was $91,824,563.

The Central Bank for Cooperatives loaned $6,285,860 during November and regional banks for cooperatives $330,923. Loans to cooperative marketing organizations under the agricultural marketing act were $484,011 during November, a decline from the October total of $695,093. The total to cooperatives outstanding on November 30 was $141,107,605.

During Thanksgiving week the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul broke its all-time high record by lending more than $1,000,000 in one day.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—DRIED FRUITS—Market, steady and unchanged.

Curb Defeated In New Rally; Closes Mixed

Alcohols Disregard Trend; Sales Unchanged at 228,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Consolidation of yesterday's advances occurred on the curb exchange today. After several mild attempts to extend the previous day's rally, the list settled back to close moderately irregular.

Alcohols again disregarded general market trends and staged a small rally. Oils were steady while mixed quotations were the rule in metals and utilities.

Hiram Walker closed 2⅜ points higher in active trading and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams gained about a point. Pan-American Airways and Driver Harris moved up 1¾ each in light turnovers. Pioneer Gold continued to attract buyers although improvement was limited to a minor fraction. Gulf Oil, Parke Davis, Standard Oil of Ohio and Electric Bond & Share finished steady to moderately higher.

Aluminum Company of America yielded a major fraction on profit taking. Lake Shore Mines dropped 2½ points in rather active selling. American Gas & Electric common eased, but the preferred advanced 1¼.

Transfers which approximated 228,000 shares were about the same as yesterday.

Dollar Turns Upward on Foreign Marts

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—Showing strength after the market's official close, the dollar's final quotation tonight was $5.11¾ to the pound, a gain of 2¾ cents to the pound from yesterday's overnight rate of 5.14½.

The official close was at $5.15¾ to the pound. Appreciation afterward was largely due to continental operators whose short coverings in francs brought the franc quotation 1 centime down to 82.81 to the pound.

As the dollar did not tend to weaken on this operation, the continent took advantage of it by buying American currency. Their sales of francs caused the franc to weaken at the end. The final official quotation on the franc was 833.03 to the pound. The Dutch guilder ended at 8.08 to the pound.

Showing a loss of 35 centimes, the dollar closed in Paris at 16.10 francs (6.21 cents to the franc). It opened at 16.15 francs (6.19 cents) after yesterday's close of 16.45 francs (6.08 cents).

The dollar sold in Berlin at 2.64 marks (37.71 cents to the mark). The quotation yesterday was 2.71 marks (36.53 cents).

New York Central Line Loadings Drop in Week

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—New York Central's freight loadings last week, which included the Thanksgiving holiday, totaled 79,224 cars, compared with 91,901 the week before.

Net paid business for the month was $10,559,770, an increase of 21 per cent over the highest previous month of 1933.

Cotton Reacts Slightly Under Southern Sales

January Closes at 9.93 as General Market Drops 6 to 9 Points.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Cotton lost part of yesterday's advance under Southern selling and scattering liquidation promoted by the slightly steadier ruling of the dollar in foreign exchanges and an absence of aggressive support.

March contracts sold off to 10.07, or 9 points net lower, and closed at 10.08, with the general market ending barely steady at net declines of 3 to 6 points.

Trading was in comparatively small volume. Yesterday's buying appeared to have eased the technical position to some extent and, with general business restricted, the market responded to comparatively small selling orders.

December Prices Ease.

In the late trading December eased to 9.92 and May to 10.19, and closing quotations were at the lowest of the day except for May, which was about 4 points up on covering.

Traders were inclined to await further developments, including the Government crop report due on Friday. Some early selling from the South was accompanied by reports that offerings from the country had increased slightly on yesterday's advance, although the basis was reported steady and unchanged.

Exports today, 33,873, making 3,535,903 so far this season. Port receipts, 21,383. United States port stocks, 4,123,633.

Cotton Seed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steady in the early trading today on covering and local buying of May and July on the steadiness of other commodities, but eased under liquidation with final prices unchanged to 3 points net lower. Sales were 39 contracts, including six exchanges from January to May at 45 points. Bleachable spot nominal; December, 4.25; January, 4.29; March, 4.59; May, 4.77; July, 4.95.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Quarterly meetings of the directors of National Steel Corporation will hereafter be held on the tenth of the month, following the close of each quarter. The session scheduled for December 10 will take place January 10. The change is being made in order that the directors may know the result of each period's operations.

J. B. Doan, president of the American Tool Works, has been elected a director of American Rolling Mill Co., succeeding the late James P. Orr.

John Bass, formerly vice president, has been elected president of Fajardo Sugar Co., to succeed the late James B. Coombs.

Standards Statistics Co. says that among the industries having the most favorable prospects at the present time are automobiles and trucks, automobile parts, building, chemicals, food products, industrial machinery, metal containers, nonferrous metals, petroleum, railroads, rail equipment, retail trade and steel.

American Machinist says suppliers of machinery "are distinctly encouraged by sales for November, which resisted the usual seasonal decline and, according to a preliminary report, held the level reached in October." Export and Government business made this showing possible by offsetting a slight recession in domestic trade, the publication explains.

Offering is being made of $14,250,000 in 2½ per cent collateral trust debentures of the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks. They expire in three months.

Commercial failures for the five business days ended November 29 totaled 268, against 301 for the full preceding week, Dun & Bradstreet reports. A year ago insolvencies numbered 467.

Since the first of the year the New York Curb Exchange has removed 883 issues from the list traded on its floor. Most of them were inactive securities, the major portion being unlisted stocks. It is understood that the removals have been virtually completed. At the close of business today the curb had 1,160 unlisted stocks, 356 fully listed issues, 622 unlisted bonds and 19 fully listed bonds.

Raw silk imports into the United States during November totaled 32,319 bales, a decrease of 15,105 bales from the same month last year, the Silk Association of America reported today. Deliveries to American mills during the month amounted to 34,822 bales, or 3,133 under the same month in 1932.

Holders of the $2,684,000 6 per cent notes due February 1, 1934, of the Thermoid Co have been asked by the company to extend the maturity date for three years. Difficulties in the way of financing operations under the present status of the securities act are cited by the company as a barrier against meeting the maturity.

November sales of Neisner Bros. Stores amounted to $1,294,995, against $1,187,048 in the same month last year. For the eleven months ended November 30, sales were $12,645,187, compared with $12,632,629 last year.

F. W. Woolworth Co. sales for November totaled $20,995,849, an increase of 3.8 per cent over a year ago. Sales for the eleven months ended November 30 totaled $213,517,668, a decrease of 1.5 per cent. October volume was 1.9 per cent under 1932.

German Cable Exports Drop During 1933

Exports of cable from Germany during the first nine months of the current year were substantially below those for the corresponding period of 1932, according to advices from Consul B. F. Yost, Cologne, made public by the Commerce Department.

Total shipments in the 1933 period amounted to 12,524 metric tons, valued at 8,314,000 reichsmarks, against 15,709 metric tons, valued at 10,638,000 reichsmarks, for the nine-month period of last year.

This decline in German cable exports, the report states, was due to a number of causes, one of which was the depreciated value of the pound sterling and the American dollar.

Practically all of Germany's important markets curtailed their orders during the current year. The extent of this curtailment is indicated by the fact that The Netherlands, Germany's largest customer for this material, took only 3,719 metric tons in the 1933 period, as compared with 5,310 tons in the first nine months of last year.

Because of various government measures, Germany's domestic cable business has recently shown some improvement, the report shows.

Loft Officials Cited in Claim For Back Pay

Summoned Here to Answer Employes' Demand for Code Difference.

Officials of Loft, Inc., operators of candy stores and restaurants in Washington and elsewhere, have been summoned to appear before the National Compliance Board tomorrow in connection with new charges rising from their NRA wage difficulties.

The company, it was explained at the NRA yesterday, must "explain a refusal to make restitution of wages due employes of New York stores during the period when the firm was not complying with the President's Reemployment Agreement."

The Loft concern recently lost its Blue Eagle after employes charged it had paid them less than the NRA rate, but regained the emblem after promising to live up to the agreement.

It developed yesterday, however, according to the NRA, that the company contended future compliance would not involve payment of back wages at the rate fixed by the Blue Eagle agreement. Therefore, the New York board referred the controversy to the National Compliance Board.

2d Scottsboro Negro Doomed

Appeal, However, to Stay Execution of Two in Attack Case.

Decatur, Ala., Dec. 6 (AP).—Clarence Norris, Negro, today was convicted of participating in a mass attack on two white women hoboes and, with Heywood Patterson, sentenced to die February 2.

Thir executions were automatically stayed, however, by notice of appeal by Samuel S. Leibowitz, chief of defense counsel for both Negroes, who announced their cases will be taken to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

Patterson and Norris were convicted of taking part in an alleged attack by nine Negroes on Mrs. Victoria Price and Ruby Bates on a freight train in northern Alabama in 1931.

Patterson's third conviction came last week and Norris was found guilty today by a jury which had been out four hours.

Steel Rail Order Elates Pittsburgh

Mills to Run Full Speed and Employ 2,000.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 6 (AP).—Smiles wreathed the faces of thousands of workers, shopkeepers and professional men in Pittsburgh tonight as word was passed that once again the giant steel mills are to open up at high speed.

The placing of a 100,000-ton rail order by the Pennsylvania Railroad, more than 40,000 of which will be fabricated here, was looked on as the forerunner of the 900,000 tons which the roads are expected to purchase in the near future.

It will mean the almost immediate employment of more than 2,000 workers. The order was the largest received in three years.

Swift's and Armour's Announce Pay Boosts

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—The two big packing companies of Chicago, Swift's and Armour's, today announced pay increases which eventually are expected to fatten the pay envelopes of more than 15,000 employes by upward of 10 per cent.

The Chicago plants of both companies announced 4 cents an hour increases had been made effective December 2 for both unskilled workmen and employes in the higher-pay brackets. The new rate for unskilled workers is 46½ cents an hour.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WHOSE afraid of a trumpet player?
Or a soprano?
Or a tenor, for that matter?

Not WOL, surely, for the Washington member of the young but ambitious General Broadcasting System has announced itself willing and ready to walk right out among them with invitations to come up for an audition some time.

For the General Broadcasting System's ambition envisions production, soon after the first of the year, of musical comedy broadcasts by its own company; and trumpeters, sopranos and tenors are needed most at this juncture.

Scheduled first for the air is a somewhat abridged edition of "Rip Van Winkle," to be followed by a shortened "Alice in Wonderland." Then, it is hoped, talents will have been sufficiently inspired to permit production of original musical shows.

At least two of WOL's heretofore strictly local acts are to go to the network next week, posibly with the backing of advertising sponsors. Gus and Hercules is one of them; Ronald Dawson's Northern Dramatic Co., which tomorrow night plays "Time Will Tell" locally, the other.

A hearse bearing the body of Sir Arthur Curry, Canadian war hero, vainly attempted to negotiate the steep grade that leads to Montreal's Mt. Royal Cemetery. Sleet covered the pavement. Wheels spun aimlessly.

On the summit waited announcers with microphones that were to carry the burial rites to listeners along Canadian and Columbia Broadcasting System chains Tuesday afternoon.

In New York, C. B. S. waited for its program arranged in advance by the Canadian Radio Commission. Nothing was heard. For three minutes the air was dead, then Columbia hastily put a broadcast together, wired stations along the network:

"By way of explanation • • • Due to circumstances beyond our control in Canada this did not come through as scheduled, which resulted in dead air. Sorry!"

Columbia minds in Washington and New York were weighing disposition of a nickel-cased stop-watch yesterday.

The watch, property of WJSV Engineer Clyde Hunt, suddenly had become a relic of history. It recorded officially for newsmen gathered in the diplomatic reception room in the State Department Tuesday the exact time Utah ratified repeal, the minute Secretary Phillips signed the formal proclamation of the twenty-first amendment.

Leading candidates in the C. B. S. minds to receive the watch, symbol of prohibition's death knell, were Secretary Phillips, Alfred E. Smith, Postmaster General Farley and President Roosevelt.

Xavier Cugat, N. B. C. bandsman (above), amuses fellow artists at Radio City by drawing cartoons of them in spare moments. Al Brigode recruited Judy Talbot (inset) from Cleveland for singing with his orchestra on C. B. S. networks Sunday and Tuesday nights.

Many of the finest symphony conductors and solo artists in the world comprise the company that will produce a series of one-hour recitals for National and a motor car manufacturer beginning Sunday, December 17.

New York Philharmonic's Bruno Walter, Cincinnati Symphony's Eugene Goossens, Philadelphia Orchestra's Eugene Ormandy, Metropolitan Opera's Artur Bodanzky, Rochester Symphony's Fritz Reiner, New York Orchestra's Walter Damrosch, Sir Henry Wood and Nikolai Sokoloff, Cleveland Symphony's Artur Rodzinski, St. Louis Symphony's Vladimir Golschmann, Detroit's Ossip Gabrilowitsch and Metropolitan's Tullio Serafin are the conductors.

Jascha Heifetz, Yehudi Menuhin, Efrem Zimbalist, Josef Hofman, Jose Iturbi, Vladimir Horowitz, Rosa Ponselle, Lily Pons, Lucrezia Bori, Lotte Lehmann, Elizabeth Rethberg, Tito Schipa and Richard Bonelli are the artists.

Conductor Walter and Violinist Heifetz are the first broadcasters. WMAL will be the local outlet for the series.

WMAL Announcer John Mayo recalled vividly a certain merry evening in Paris when Gen. Pershing walked into the studios for a Community Chest appeal Tuesday night • • • the general and John caused John to get tangled with a lot of very tough lieutenants and colonels that night in 1918 • • • Mayor-Elect LaGuardia will be available on New York's WABC at 7 tonight • • • most of WJSV's day schedule for tomorrow and Saturday will be taken by broadcasts of District liquor control hearings from the District Building.

Postmaster William Mooney takes the air on WRC at 6:45 tonight to tell to shop for Christmas early, mail, &c.

Curley Club Seeking Donations for Charity

The Curley Club's annual donation party for the benefit of the Little Sisters of the Poor will be held December 17, from 2 to 4 p. m., at the Home of the Little Sisters.

Donations of dry or canned goods, fruits, vegetables, tobacco, articles of clothing, or cash, will be taken at the home. Miss Gretchen Baden, chairman of the Curley Club welfare committee, will be in charge.

INHABITANTS

If our old town seems sad and gray, it is not hard to move away. There are so many smooth machines, including cars and submarines, and bicycles and railway trains and saddle mules and boats and planes. I wonder much why people stay in dismal hamlets for a day. Here is dismal village placed upon a barren, windswept waste; the air is full of dust and sand when summer bakes the wretched land, and when the winter tempests blow the same old air is full of snow. It's never pleasant in this spot; it's always either cold or hot, the people either bake or freeze, they have no comfort and no ease. The view is desolate and bare, the trees are dead for lack of care, the weather-beaten buildings look like something found by Capt Cook. Yet people come and settle down to spend their lives in such a town, to languish there until they're old, to vegetate and grow green mold. To rear up kids in such a place is nothing short of a disgrace; no wonder that, in after years, they leave to act as racketeers. In such a dump sad people stay when they might promptly move away. The traveler who journeys by can only gasp and wonder why. So many towns and cities smile, and offer comforts worth our while.

Civil Service Eligibility Extension Considered

A decision will probably be reached by the end of this week on whether the Civil Service Commission will extend the eligibility of persons on the reemployment registers, officials of the Commission said yesterday.

By a rule of the Commission, names are kept on the register for only a year. When dropped they lose their preferred status for reappointment to other government agencies.

NRA Utilizes Aid of Federal Trade Board

Commission Expert Wins Compliance in Texas Ice Dispute.

NRA and the Federal Trade Commission have been brought closer together. It was announced yesterday that a commission examiner had acted as a recovery administration agent in bringing a San Antonio, Tex., manufacturer into compliance with the ice code.

In its report to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the commission stated that on request of the National Compliance Board, it sent one of its examiners to San Antonio to interview the ice manufacturer, who had neither signed the code nor displayed the Blue Eagle, and who openly defied the Government to make an example of him.

The commission investigator succeeded in persuading the man to sign the code. The examiner also procured statements from 13 rival ice manufacturers promising strict compliance.

The San Antonio situation had "threatened to disrupt the San Antonio market and might have brought general noncompliance in Texas," the commission reported.

The commission also has been requested by NRA to investigate reported violations of the cleaning and dyeing code. The report will decide whether NRA will start court action. Should it do so, FTC attorneys will handle the case.

Others in the cast are Dave Rawlings, Leonard Stevens, John Gunion, Edward Kimball, Fred Stevenson, Hamilton Coyt, Morris Shapiro and John Young.

Industry Chiefs Hear NRA Opposed

Manufacturers Are Against Labor, License Terms.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Fourteen field representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers reported today that 98 per cent of the country's manufacturers are opposed to the collective bargaining and licensing provisions of the National industrial recovery act.

The reports were announced at a meeting of the National Industrial Council, composed of officers of State associations affiliated with the N. A. M.

James A. Emery, of Washington, N. A. M. general counsel, urged that Congress be asked to eliminate the licensing and collective bargaining provisions. He said that while the licensing provision has not been used, it is a threat which constantly disturbs industry.

New Law Held Need in Fight On D. C. Slums

Low Cost Housing Report Forwarded to Public Works Official.

The Federal Government's slum clearance program and low-cost housing here and in other cities is in danger of nullification unless laws restricting use of unfit and insanitary dwellings are strengthened, Frederic A. Delano, civic housing committee chairman, said yesterday.

He delivered the criticism, after sending to the Public Works Administration a report by the civic housing committees on advantageous sites for slum elimination and housing demonstrations. The report is in the hands of Robert D. Kohn, housing director in the PWA.

The report is based on recommendations made by the advisory and executive committees, headed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. Delano, who is also chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commisson, explained it contained a number of alternate suggestions. Details are being kept secret in order to prevent property owners from boosting prices..

Dilapidated, unsafe dwellings, which are firetraps and breeding places for disease, are numerous in Washington, he said, and much remains to be done before they are abolished. The law's strict regulation of new buildings is in marked contrast to the policy of tolerating such dangerous structures, he pointed out.

Condemnation of unfit properties was given a setback about four years ago, Delano quoted Dr. William C. Fowler, District health officer, as saying, when the local government was sued and had to pay $1,300 to an owner whose building had been condemned and razed.

"It seems to me," said the housing committee chairman, "the solution is to make a law which will be reasonable and have enforcement that is effective."

Chicago Employer Loses Blue Eagle

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—A Chicago restaurateur was ordered to forfeit his Blue Eagle today. His was the first NRA emblem withdrawn in Chicago.

Prof. Andrew A. Bruce, chairman of the Chicago Compliance Board, announced it had been charged and denied by Peter Coconis that:

His employes in a South Side cafe worked more than the stipulated 48 hours a week for women and 54 hours for men.

He paid less than the minimum wages of 28 cents an hour.

He falsified books to conceal these violations, and

He used subterfuge to frustrate the spirit of the President's reemployment agreement.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

ELMER SIGHS FOR THE OLD DAYS.

"Yes, I am very much disappointed with legalized drinking," confessed Elmer Twitchell. "Gimme the old prohibition days!"

* * * *

Elmer seemed pretty disillusioned. "This here repeal has taken all the speculative spirit out of drinking," he continued. "You walk right into a place, ask for good likker and get good likker. Gimme the old prohibition days when you were taking a chance every time you lifted a glass!

* * * *

"I got under the wire the minute the repeal barrier was sprung, but it was terribly disappointing to get honest likker from honest people. All the old gambling element was eliminated. It called for no courage, no backbone, no pioneering spirit.

* * * *

"After 14 years of frequenting speakeasies and never knowing whether the next one would contain TNT or dynamite, it seems pretty tame to drink good reliable whisky.

* * * *

"Why, it's almost cowardly. As a veteran speakeasy patron, I call this safe and sane drinking positively effeminate. I must have visited 50 legalized places last night and I never saw a man felled like a log by the first drink. Mollycoddle drinking, that's what I call it.

* * * *

"And what disgusted me was that the more they drank the happier they seemed. Gimme the old prohibition days when nobody dared to be happy after the first two shots. You never knew in the Volstead era whether you'd feel like slugging the man next to you or throwing a glass at the bartender just by way of starting another Custer massacre, but you knew darned well that you certainly wouldn't turn into a crooner!"

* * * *

Elmer took some spirits of ammonia and resumed. "It is pitiful," he said. "Nothing but open drinking, openly arrived at. No arguments with doormen, no hatchet squads, no check kiting, no raids, no gun play, no trouble with anybody. And what likker!"

* * * *

Elmer made a sour face. "It was so palatable you could drink it slowly and enjoy it. Have we become a race of sissies?"

A WISE PRECAUTION EVIDENTLY.

Ima Dodo says she has read about the liquor control commissioners and wants to know where she can get one for her old man who is planning to celebrate repeal and has no control.

No liquor will be allowed at Sing Sing under repeal, it is announced. The inmates seem to find it attractive enough as it is.

YALE BOWL.

The old Yale grad was leaving the Yale-Princeton game soon after the opening of the third period.

"No return checks. You can't come back, sir!" warned the gatekeeper.

The old grad's eyes brightened for a moment.

"That's great," he said, "and would you mind putting it in writing?"

Hearings Open Today on Food And Drug Bill

Prof. Tugwell's Proposals to Tighten Measure Will Be Debated.

Proposals of Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell to tighten, amend and modernize existing pure food and drugs laws will be debated in public hearings on the Copeland bill, which opens at 10 a. m. today in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building. In view of her interest in the subject, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been invited to be present.

The bill, written by Prof. Tugwell, sponsored by the Department of Agriculture and introduced on the last day of the Seventy-second Congress by Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, is designed to bring up to date the 27-year-old food and drugs act which is the late Harvey Wiley's monument.

In addition to being designed to "plug loopholes" in the present statute, the Copeland bill contains the following new features:

False Advertising Hit.

Jurisdiction over false advertising; inclusion of cosmetics; control of poisonous foods; definitions and standards for foods; adequate control of false curative claims for drugs, and provisions for informative labeling of foods and drugs.

The hearings will be conducted by a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Commerce, and the first witness will be Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Opponents of the measure are expected to be heard at the afternoon session. They have been asked to consolidate their objections as much as possible.

Among the witnesses will be W. G. Campbell, chief of the food and drug administration, and representatives of the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

Public Indifferent, Report.

Ray C. Schlatterer, secretary of the drug, chemical and allied trades section of the New York Board of Trade, which is leading the opposition, issued last night a survey of Chambers of Commerce in widely scattered cities reporting no evidence of public demand for alteration of the present food and drugs bill, according to the United Press.

The law in its tentative form prohibits any "misleading impression" on labels of foods or drugs; prohibits the claim on medicine packages that the contents constitute a "cure;" imposes much more rigid standards of sanitation on food manufacturers; requires publication on food packages of formulas of manufacture including a list of ingredients in order of weight; and restricts advertising to honest statements of what the product will accomplish.

It also adds cosmetics, now almost unregulated, to the products controlled by the act. The Secretary of Agriculture is given wide regulatory powers, subject to court review.

New Toy Fund Headquarters Yuletide Scene

Armloads of Playthings Pour in for Needy Children.

The spirit of Christmas has found a new home in Washington.

It is in The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund headquarters on the first floor of the Washington Building at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

No one can doubt this who saw the throngs of happy-faced folks who entered the headquarters yesterday, their arms laden with toys and dolls, every one of which was to bring a merry Christmas to some one of the 25,000 needy children, threatened with a toyless Yuletide, but for the efforts of The Post Toy Fund and similar enterprises.

How the Santa Claus Lady's eyes shone with joy over each new gift! How the toys already at headquarters welcomed the new arrivals! It was as though an old home day in Toyville. The place resounded, to those who had the eyes and ears of the spirit to see and hear, with the faint, sweet voices of dolls, the bark of pet wooly dogs and the soft cadences of the musical tops that whirled about, even as Indian dervishes, in their delight at the new arrivals.

Proof of Yule Spirit.

A dozen human interest stories could be uncovered through the motives which prompted these gifts. Some of them came in memory of dear ones; other gifts meant real sacrifices for the sake of little children; Government employes, despite pay cuts and payless furloughs, had given their mites for the fund.

Any one may help, and any gift is welcome, large or small. Even the toys of which little children have tired or perhaps damaged somewhat can be repaired and renovated and bring joy to the hearts of needy little children. Send gifts by mail to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund, and toys and dolls may be left at The Post Toy Fund headquarters in the Washington Building.

Child Faith at Stake.

To preserve a child's faith is the high privilege that can be won by every donor to The Post Toy and Doll Fund. That is why Santa Claus aids and fund workers dare not fail.

One little 13-year-old boy wrote: "Dear Santa Claus Lady—My daddy has just been put on the 30-hour a week roll. But, as we are back in our rent, he will not be able to buy us any toys. I have two brothers, 10 and 14 years of age. I hope you will try to give us some toys. I like jig-saw puzzles. I hope you won't forget us."

Dolls Sought for Sisters.

A little boy writes to the Santa Claus Lady: "We are all trying to be very brave in our family. Mother has a little sewing to do. My father died last month. Sometimes we are a little hungry, but when we are we sing. Of course, if we find our stockings empty Christmas morning I will sing any way. But I am afraid mother may cry and my little sisters, 8 and 10, really expect to get dolls. Please send them some. Even little ones would please them. I guess you have lots of little boys who want roller skates, but if you have an extra pair, even those that have been used, I would like them. If the rest get presents Christmas morning I will be glad anyway. I hope all the boys and girls you remember will have a nice Christmas."

A brand new toy will be the price of admission to the party, the feature of which will be a puppet performance of "The Three Little Pigs," staged by Theodore Tiller, jr., and his marionette company. The sketch has been written by Tiller, and Everett Stevens composed all the music. The company includes Myrtle Stevens, William Tappan, Jean Howard, and Jack Mace.

Several vaudeville skits, excerpts from "Tiller Follies of 1933," will precede "Three Little Pigs."

Lecturer Calls Prayer Most Inherent Impulse

Prayer is "one of the most native impulses of humanity," Gavin W. Allan, Canadian Christian Science lecturer, said in a lecture at the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

"Listening for God's voice," said Mr. Allan, and a "yearning" to understand God, is a higher form of prayer than a mere plea for help from above.

Fines Self

Prisoner Proves Harsher Than Judge Hitt.

Daniel Murphy, 36, colored, self-appointed preacher, was allowed to fix his own sentence in Police Court yesterday but Judge Isaac R. Hitt went him one better.

Murphy, charged with disorderly conduct, when found preaching outside an employment bureau at 480 Indiana avenue northwest, pleaded guilty.

"What sentence do you think you should have," Judge Hitt asked.

Murphy named the minimum sentence, $10 fine or 10 days in jail.

"You are an honest man, Murphy," said the judge, "I was just going to give you a chance and take your personal bond not to commit the offense again."

2 States Hunt Mail Robbers

Guard, Shot as Six Bandits Took Wrong Pouches, Is Recovering.

Enlisting the aid of Maryland and Virginia authorities, Washington police last night pushed their search for the daring band of mail robbers who Tuesday night shot down a postoffice guard and escaped with three pouches of registered mail from a truck in Union Station.

Meanwhile Francis J. White, 57, of No. 2 I street northwest, the postal guard, was reported recovering in Providence Hospital. His right thigh was shattered by two bullets. White, former marine, was given credit for saving a valuable mail cargo on another truck.

Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, directing the man hunt, declared the loot was negligible. It is believed the bandits were after other pouches of registered matter and picked the wrong truck.

The holdup was characterized as one of the most daring in the District's history. Six men, armed with rifles and revolvers, escaped in two automobiles. Descriptions of the men and their machines were broadcast throughout neighboring States.

The robbery apparently was perfectly planned and worked in clock-like fashion, declared Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke.
